LOWELL SAYS HARVARD WON'T MUZZLE PROFESSORS

PRES. LOWELL REPLIES TO PROF. MEYER

The letter of Professor Kuno Meyer to the Harvard authorities, in which he resigned his candidacy as exchange professor at Harvard because of the publication in the Harvard Advocate of the prize poem, "Gott Mit Uns," drew spirited responses from all concerned at Harvard today.

President A. Lawrence Lowell made public his reply to Professor Meyer. Professor Bliss Perry of the English department and Dean Briggs made statements by way of reply to the charge of anti-Germanism, and the Harvard corporation issued a formal statement.

Professor Meyer's letter spoke of the publication of the poem as a "gratuitous and shameless insult to a friendly nation," and charged that "Harvard has wantonly and wickedly gone out of its way to carry strife into the hallowed peace of the academic world." The poem Professor Meyer called "damnable."

REPLY BY LOWELL.

The poem was written by C. Huntington Jacobs, '16, and was awarded the Advocate prize by Professors Perry and Briggs.

President Lowell's letter to Professor Meyer reads as follows:

My Dear Professor Meyer:

Your letter has come, and I am grieved at the feeling of irritation against Harvard that it shows.

The poem and prize to which you refer, I had never heard of until your letter came.

On inquiry, I find that it was a prize offered by the students for a student poem, a matter with which the authorities of the university can hardly interfere.

As you are aware, the freedom of speech of neither the professors nor the students in an American university is limited, nor are they themselves subject in their utterances to the direction of the authorities.

WON'T MUZZLE 'EM.

On the contrary, we have endeavored to maintain the right of all members of the university to express themselves freely, without censorship or supervision by the authorities of the university, and have applied this rule impartially to those who favor Germany and those who favor the allies—to the former in the face of a pretty violent agitation for muzzling professors by the alumni of the university and outsiders.

This policy of freedom of speech we shall continue to pursue, for we believe it to be the only one which accords with the principle of academic freedom.

I hope the time will come when you and your colleagues in Germany will recognize that this course is the only right one; and that it is essential to the cause of universal scholarship and human progress that scholars should associate together again on friendly

BRITISH TAKE ST. JULIEN, SO PARIS REPORTS

By International News Service.

PARIS, April 28.—An unofficial announcement in the Petit Parisien today states that the British have recaptured St. Julien in West Flanders from the Germans, but this is not confirmed by the War Office. St. Julien is about three miles northeast of Ypres.

Two hundred thousand French troops are being rushed into West Flanders and Northern France to reinforce the allies' lines. Some of these reinforcements are being massed between Ypres and Dixmude, where the full force of the latest German drive was felt while the others were strengthening the British lines on the Armentieres front.

All train service north of Paris has been given over to the movements of troops. Even hospital trains operating between the front and the base hospitals are being side-tracked to give the troop trains right of way.

Although it is officially claimed by the French War Office that the German rush toward Calais has been halted it is evident that Field Marshal Sir John French, commander of the British troops, and General Joffre, the French commander-in-chief, expect the Germans to attempt another offensive movement.

Several German trenches, six quick-firing guns and 200 prisoners were captured by the Franco-Belgian forces at Het Sas in Belgium on Tuesday, it was officially announced today by the Belgian Legation, according to dispatches.

GROWING IN VIOLENCE.

The offensive movement of the Belgian and French forces between Ypres and Dixmude along the canal, is growing in violence and the attacks against the new German front are incessant.

The Belgian official statement follows:

The French and Belgians have

Arbitrators Go to Springfield

Charles H. Wood and Frank Bump, commissioners of the State Board of Conciliation and Arbitration, left Boston at noon today for Springfield to take action in an effort to prevent a strike of the trolleymen of the Springfield Street Railway Company in that city.

John H. Reardon of the executive board of the trolley men's union declared today that unless three men discharged by the trolley company are reinstated a strike would be called late this afternoon.

The employees of the Springfield Street Railway Company struck for better working conditions last month and, after a conference of their leaders and Commissioners Woods and Bump of the State Board of Conciliation and Arbitration, voted to return to work pending a final adjustment of the grievances of the men.

Astor Unaware of Stepmother's Engagement

Vincent Astor, who is at Marblehead inspecting the hydroaeroplane being built for his use by the Burgess factory there, said today that he did not know whether or not his stepmother, Madeleine Force Astor, widow of John Jacob Astor, is engaged to Clarence H. Mackay.

Mr. Astor was shown a New York dispatching reporting the engagement. Mrs. Astor and Mr. Mackay are at present with a party of friends in the South, and were in Washington yesterday.

Vincent Astor said:

"I haven't seen Mrs. Madeleine Force Astor for several weeks, so I cannot comment on this report. I do not know whether she is engaged to Mr. Mackay or not, nor do I know whether anything of that sort is probable. So far as I know, they are merely friends."

If Mrs. Madeleine Astor weds again she will lose a life interest in $5,000,000 provided in Colonel Astor's will. Mr. Mackay is immensely wealthy.

Anna Smith Is Turned Over to Care of Parents

After being kindly advised in the Newton District Court today by Judge Kennedy, Miss Anna E. Smith, the fourteen-year-old Newton high school girl, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank H. Smith of Newton, who disappeared from home last Friday and who subsecuently was found in New York city, was placed on probation until June 25, in custody of her parents.

Miss Smith was charged with forging her father's name to a check for $125. Her hearing was private, and she was obliged to enter no plea.

Chamber for New Postal Stations

The Chamber of Commerce, in a letter to Postmaster Murray today, offers its co-operation in a plan to establish combination postal stations at the North and South terminals. The purpose is to abolish the several small stations in different parts of the city. Many of these stations are now overcrowded and all efforts to secure additional space have failed.

Lawrence License Case Is Postponed

The case of Michael F. Brogan, who brought a writ of mandamus against Mayor John P. BRAVES ANNEX A BIG TWIRLER FROM BROOKLYN

Pitcher Pat Ragan, a big "brute of a man," who has been twirling for the Brooklyn club of the National League, is now a member of the Braves and will report to Manager Stallings at once.

This news came to the AMERICAN in a telegram from President Gaffney, received early this afternoon. The telegram reads:

"Pitcher Ragan of Brooklyn awarded to the Boston club. Joins at once."

Just what is meant by the word "awarded" is not known, but at any rate the player is to wear a Boston uniform and that is enough.

HAS A GOOD PHYSIQUE.

Ragan is a strong, husky, splendidly built man who has been on the Brooklyn staff for three years or so. He has pitched good ball and his physique is such that he can be worked often. But his good work has been largely wasted as the Brooklyns have been a second division club for years.

In spite of the fact that he worked for an inferior club Pat's record last season was meritorious. It was better than Christy Mathewson's, for example—and Matty pitched for the Giants who led the league most of the season.

He took part in thirty-eight games, pitching 208 innings. The average runs per game made against him was 2.99. The records of Mathewson, Marquard, Lavender, Perdue, Rixey, Demaree, Fromme, Yingling and many other well known boxmen were not as good as that of Ragan.

BRAVES STARS BACKWARD.

Some of Stallings' best pitchers—James and Tyler, for example—have been backward this Spring, which has put the burden on the Braves' second string of Boxmen.

The team got rather a poor start in the National League race and doubtless Stallings grabbed the chance to secure a pitcher of Ragan's calibre.

Ragan pitched a few innings against the Braves last week when the Brooklyns were here and appeared to be in fine condition.

Red Sox and Braves Take a Day Off

Neither the Red Sox nor the Braves will play ball today. The battle scheduled for Fenway Park between the Red Sox and New Yorks was called off early in the afternoon on account of the cold weather and the game at New York between the Braves and Giants was postponed on account of rain.

These postponed games will not be played off with the present series lists, but will be booked for some future date. In the National League President Tener allots the dates for postponed games, but in the American League the home club decides the question.

There is a rule, however, that no game postponed on the first trip of a club to a city can be played on the dates set for that series. It has to go over until the next series in the same town.

The New Yorks are here for two more days—Thursday and Friday—when they leave us and make way for the Washingtons who play here on Saturday, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, weather permitting.

GIRL TELLS OF AIDING FIANCE TO KILL HIMSELF

BRIDGEPORT, Ct., April 28."He gave me his the ring—the ring that plighted our troth. It was tied to a bit of ribbon. It was dark. How was I to know? The other end of the ribbon was attached to the trigger. He told me to jerk the ring. He was a fanciful sort. I did it to humor him. I jerked the ring as he bade me. Then came the flash and explosion, and he fell to the ground at once."

Miss Emily Wheeler, the beautiful young fiancee of Arthur Hearn Cowl, the twenty-two-year-old grandson and heir of the late George A. Hearn, millionaire merchant of New York, who committed suicide late Monday night, was half mad as she told her terrible story of the boy's death.

"I MAY NEVER FORGET."

"I'll give you this ring," he told me, she sobbed. "'Take it. Pull hard. Give it a jerk.'

"And oh, I did. I did. I feel as though I'd go mad. I can never forget it. Never."

"It was an uncanny story that the young woman told. She received the reporters in the wonderful high-ceiled drawing room of the stately home of her father, Arthur DeForest Wheeler in Stratford, just outside the town.

"Mother and father went to church after dinner," she resumed. Arthur and I were here in the drawing room talking. He seemed—oh, so well and enthusiastic. He seemed to be living in the future. He told me that traveling had cleared away that dreadful melancholia that seemed to have possessed him. He described the terrors of this trouble, saying that it changed one's whole point of view.

"'Why, do you know, dear?' he quoted. 'While we were in Bermuda I wrote you a letter saying that I did not love you and never expected to marry you. I'll go get the letter and show you.'

"He went upstairs to his rooms and returned with the letter. We read it together and he turned to me and said he wanted me to burn it. Together we went to the front porch. We sat on the front steps and struck a match. The letter burned on the gravel out there in the walk. Then it happened—I have told you."

The girl was sobbing pitifully. She is a healthy out-of-door sort, not the kind to be looked to for the more terrible emotions.

KILLED SELF FOR LOVE.

"Four months ago Arthur thought we would have to break our engagement because of his ill-health," she resumed. "At his request I returned the ring by which we had plighted our troth. But last night he said he felt so much better that he was certain we could be married in the Fall. He killed himself because he loved me, and in dying he wanted me to know that he loved me. That is the significance of the ring.

"I met Arthur three years ago when he was a student at Princeton," she said. "After that we saw a great deal of each other. Last Summer he frequently cruised over from his parents' home in Great Neck to visit us here. Last Fall we announced our engagement.

"There was nothing to cause us to worry except his health. He had been delicate from his childhood and the pursuit of his business ambitions further depleted his nervous force."

Two Firemen Badly Hurt as Truck Upsets

Two Malden firemen were severely injured today when a ladder truck responding to an alarm of fire and on which they were riding overturned at the corner of Ferry and Irving streets, Malden. The injured men, William Shanley and Thomas Powell, were at once rushed to the Malden Hospital.

According to the police report of the accident, several other firemen riding on the truck were slightly hurt. The apparatus was turning a corner at the time of the accident. Shanley and Powell had to be extricated from the damaged apparatus.

The truck was one which had been borrowed from Medford when the Malden firemen finally refused to longer ride on an old truck in use in the Malden fire department.

Today was Powell's day off in the department. He was filling in when injured.

The truck which was overturned had been discarded by the Medford Fire Department as unfit for further service. Mayor William M. Blakeley, who is chairman of the finance committee of Malden, up to the present time has failed to approve an appropriation of $12,000 now hanging fire for the purchase of new fire apparatus for the city. The old ladder truck tabooed by the firemen had been so patched with wire and rope until it was deemed dangerous to ride on.

Herbert Beale Shoots Himself at Hingham

Herbert Beal of Hingham, owner of a store which his father conducted before him, and one of the best known men on the South Shore, committed suicide this morning.

Arising at a little after dawn, at his home at No. 130 South street, Hingham, he went to the garage and barn to feed his horses. A moment later his wife heard a shot and ran out to find him dead. Her screams brought neighbors.

Beal had carried a revolver fifteen years. Today he stuck the muzzle in his mouth and pulled the trigger. Mrs. Beal believes business worries had preyed upon her husband's mind for the past month. Beal leaves three children.

AUSTRIANS TORPEDO CRUISER IN ADRIATIC

By FRANKLIN P. MERRICK.
Special Correspondent of the International News Service.

PARIS, April 28.—The French armored cruiser Leon Gambetta has been torpedoed and sunk in the Adriatic Sea. Part of her crew of 725 men was saved, but the loss of life is believed to have been heavy. The cruiser was torpedoed off Otranto, the important Italian port on the Adriatic.

Dispatches from Rome this afternoon say that the Gambetta was in Italian territorial waters when it was sunk. An inquiry is now being made by Italy to determine whether Italy's neutrality was violated. The scene of the Austrian submarine's attack is said in Rome to have been near Cape Saint Maria di Leuca, south of Otranto.

In announcing that the cruiser had been torpedoed, the Ministry of Marine stated today that full details had not been received. It is considered certain here, however, that the ship was attacked by a submarine from the Austrian naval base at Pola.

The distance from Pola to Otranto, which lies on the strait connecting the Adriatic and Ionian Seas, is 370 miles. The torpedoing of the Gambetta is the first report of submarine activity that far south.

The following statement was issued by the Ministry of Marine today:

"Brief dispatches inform us that the Leon Gambetta was torpedoed on the night of April 26-27 in the Adriatic, off Otranto. The details are not yet known, but it is certain that part of the crew was saved."

The Gambetta registered 12,300 tons. She was completed at Brest in 1903. She was 476 feet long and carried a crew of 725 men. The cruiser carried four 7.6-inch (45-calibre) guns in pairs in turrets fore and aft; sixteen 6.4-inch (45-calibre) guns, twelve of which were in pairs in turrets and four in casemates; twenty-four 3-pounders, two 1-pounders and two 18-inch submerged torpedo tubes. The cruiser was capable of twenty-three knots speed.

ITALIAN PEACE PARTY GAINING

By BRIXTON D'ALLAIRE.
Special Correspondent of the International News Service.

ROME, April 28.—King Victor Emmanuel today cancelled all engagements to devote his time solely to the international situation. He has withdrawn his acceptance of an invitation to attend the Garibaldi celebration at Quarto, on May 5, and will remain in Rome.

"Owing to the uncertain political situation," said a note issued today, "the King has appointed the Duke of Genoa to represent him at the Quarto celebration."

This is regarded as significant here, as the Italian interventionists have planned to make the celebration an occasion for a great patriotic demonstration, urging Italy's participation in the war on the side of the allies.

Sarcastic comment in the newspapers of France and England on Italy's failure to enter the war is having an irritating effect on Italian public opinion and the camp of the non-interventionists is gaining in recruits daily as the result.

Supporters of the neutrality policy headed by members of the former cabinet, in which Signor Giolitti was premier, are doing everything possible to foster this irritation. The non-intervention press published daily articles pointing out that the colonial policies of France and England have been aimed to embarrass Italy.

A prominent advocate of continued neutrality said today: "To say that England is Italy's traditional friend is to repeat a stereotyped phrase which time and events have deprived of any meaning. The fact is that England is Italy's friend as long as Italy will resign herself to a subordinate position and abide by England's decision in every controversy.

"Controversies are likely to arise between them any day. This is due to the fact that Italy's colonial possessions are surrounded on every side by England's.

"The same is true as regards Italy's relations with her Latin sister. It was Francesco Crispi who thwarted Italy's aspirations in Tunis that led Italy to seek support and protection in the triple alliance.

"That alliance still holds. It should never be disrupted."

Russian Plane Shot Down, 3 Men Killed

BUDAPEST, via Berlin and Amsterdam, April 28.—Three Russian military aviators were killed when an aeroplane of the Nieuport type was shot down by Hungarian troops, near Szebela, southwest of Stryj, Galicia. The fourth occupant of the machine was taken prisoner.

200,000 MORE MEN FOR ALLIES' LINE

taken several German trenches at Het Sas. More than 600 Germans dead were counted upon the field. Six quick-firing guns and 200 prisoners were taken by the Franco-Belgian forces. The attack by our troops continues.

"Het Sas lies on the east bank of Yser, or Ypres canal as it is sometimes called, about five and a half miles north of Ypres.

All the hospitals in Belgium are filled with German soldiers wounded in the latest attempt of the Kaiser's forces to cut their way through the allies' lines to the French coast—an attempt which many British military experts now declare has completely collapsed. There are 7,200 wounded Germans in the military hospitals at Bruges.

SIFTEN LINES.

Field Marshal Sir John French has brought up reinforcements to the Ypres front and the British and French lines north of the shell-smashed city of Ypres are being stiffened to prevent the Germans from closing in and cutting off the troops holding the place.

Military writers on some of the London newspapers, according to dispatches, are taking a pessimistic view of the situation at Ypres, expressing the opinion that while the German offensive has been checked, the crisis in the fighting for the Teutons has not yet been passed.

The occupation of Het Sas and St. Julien by the allies has driven the Germans from using important roadways west of the canal which they had previously won.

Air fighting is in progress on a big scale above Ypres. The Germans sent an aerial armada of great size skyward to prevent the aviators of the allies from spotting the German lines to spy out troop movements, and some of the most spectacular fighting of the war have taken place above the artillery and rifle fire of the contestants.

French troops operating on the eastern slopes of the Meuse Heights have gained more than half a mile from the Germans in their continued offensive in the Woevre district, according to an official statement issued by the French War Office today.

The main attacks of the French were launched against the front of the Les Eparges-Calonne trench and it was there that the war office says the Germans being compelled to retire beneath the severe artillery fire and the assaults of the French infantry. A network of important roadways lies in the zone which the French achieved this success, and the operations there show that the French general staff has renewed its efforts to cut the German line of communications in the north and force a retirement of the German forces at St. Mihiel.

AUSTRO-GERMAN LOSSES 41,000

By HENRY L. PERRY.
Special Correspondent of the International News Service.

GENEVA, April 28.—Austro-German losses at Uzsok Pass, and on the Carpathian front south of Stryj, Galicia, in the recent fighting there total 41,000 men, according to the Tribuna, which also states that the Russians have made a gain of two miles at Uzsok Pass.

"Eight Austrian regiments attacked the new Russian position defended by two regiments in Uzsok Pass on Monday," says the Tribuna. "After four hours' battle the Russians repulsed, but received reinforcements when they reached Hill No. 369 and made a strong counter-attack, routing the Austrians and advancing two miles.

"Austrian losses in the recent fighting at Uzsok Pass were 12,000 killed and 29,000 taken prisoners, including 240 officers.

"A battle between Stryj and the heights dominating Mazmirow resulted Saturday night in a Russian victory, the Austro-German forces losing 8,000 killed and wounded and 1,000 prisoners."

MEYER QUITS ON "GOTT MIT UNS"

terms without regard to national conflicts that have occurred.

Very truly yours,

A. LAWRENCE LOWELL.

PROFESSOR PERRY'S STATEMENT.

Professor Bliss Perry of the Harvard faculty, who was one of the judges in the contest in selecting the prize, said today:

Dean Briggs and I were chosen by the editors of the Harvard Advocate not as representatives of the Harvard faculty, but as unbiased judges, to pick the best war poem of the lot offered the Advocate in their war poem competition.

We selected "Gott Mit Uns" on a basis of poetical merit, and politics or sentiment played absolutely no part in our judgment of this poem.

Dean Briggs, the other judge, said:

I have nothing to say about Professor Meyer's letter published this morning, except that the poem, "Gott Mit Uns," was a boy's poem written for an undergraduate publication, and that Professor Perry and myself decided beforehand that our basis of judgment on the poem would be as to the quality of the work done and regardless of sentiment.

The Harvard Corporation issued the following statement:

On December 15, 1914, the secretary to the Corporation of Harvard College stated that the university had intended to extend to Professor Kuno Meyer a formal invitation to lecture at the university on "Celtic Culture," but, in view of his active propaganda among the Irish in behalf of Germany, and the neutral attitude assumed by the university in regards to the war, it was decided not to extend the invitation.

Professor Meyer's letter to President Lowell read, in part, as follows:

PROFESSOR MEYER'S LETTER.

I hear that the slanderous and vile poem, entitled "Gott mit Uns," which under the heading, "Harvard Prize Poem," has recently made the round of the American press, was actually awarded a prize by two members of the Harvard professorate, Messrs. Briggs and Perry. This gratuitous and shameless insult to the honor and fame of a friendly nation has called forth no word of censure or disapproval from you, sir, or from any of the authorities of the institution over which you preside.

By singling out this damnable poem for a prize, by silently conniving at its wider circulation in the press, Harvard has revealed its true spirit, which is one of unmitigated hostility to my country and people and to their cause. It is the same spirit which animates every word recently written on Germany by your predecessor.

The University of Harvard has wantonly and wickedly gone out of its way to carry strife into the hallowed peace of the academic world by heaping insults upon the people to which it, in common with and above the rest of America, owes so much. Even our open and declared enemies have refrained from such an action. You and the institution which you represent stand branded before the world and posterity as abettors of international animosity, as traitors to the sacred cause of humanity.

I regret that I was induced, at a time when my country is engaged in a life and death struggle at which you only scoff, to set foot in the deified precincts of a once noble university.

TURKS DAMAGE 2 ALLIED WARSHIPS

By International News Service.

LONDON, April 28.—According to a Turkish War Office announcement contained in dispatches today, two battleships of the Anglo-French fleet have been badly damaged by the Dardanelles forts.

It is further reported that the Gallipoli peninsula has been cleared of the British troops landed there except at one point, where the English soldiers had maintained their position under cover of their fleet's fire.

The number of prisoners taken by the Turks has been increased to 1,000, it is stated.

Turkish troops are reported advancing on Gaba Tepeh, the point where the British have entrenched. The official statement follows:

"Our aviators report that two battleships of the enemy's fleet have been badly damaged by the fire of the Dardanelles forts. The operation conducted by the allied fleet and army have thus far resulted favorably to us.

"The coast of Gallipoli peninsula has been cleared of the enemy except at Gaba Tepeh, where British troops have maintained their positions under the protection of their ships' fire. West of Ned El Bahr we easily drove the enemy out. Turkish troops are now approaching Gaba Tepeh, where the British have entrenched. The number of prisoners taken by us has been increased to 1,000."

RUSSIAN FORCE MOVING.

It is reported from Petrograd that Russian expeditionary forces are to aid the western allies in their campaign against Constantinople. Troops are concentrated at Odessa, whence they will be taken to the eastern coast of Turkey to effect a landing under protection of the Russian fleet. Announcement was made today that the Czar had arrived at Odessa to review these troops and it is believed that the expedition will sail within a few days. Russian transports and Black Sea steamers have been assembled at Odessa to convey the troops to Turkey.

The bombardment of Bosphorus ports was expected today as a measure to prevent the egress of the Turkish fleet into the Black Sea. Ottoman warships were driven back to Constantinople under the fire directed against the Bosphorus and Russian troop boats are lying off the straits to attack any warship that may emerge. It is declared by the Russian Admiralty that the Turkish fleet has been bottled up completely.

In the meantime three flotillas of Russian destroyers are scouring the Black Sea in search for Turkish merchant ships. A dispatch from Odessa states that during the operations of the last week off the Anatolian coast twenty-eight Turkish ships were sunk by the destroyers. Four of these were steamers.

OFFENSIVE IN CAUCASUS.

To weaken Turkey further and prevent troops being sent from the Caucasus front to aid the Ottoman forces in Europe, the Russians have opened a sharp offensive in the Caucasus. The following statement was issued at Petrograd today:

"On the caucasus front we are continuing our offensive along the coast. On April 25 we advanced in the direction of City. In the Alashkert Valley our cavalry engaged the Kurds, scattered them and drove them backward."

Fighting on the Carpathian and Polish fronts is practically at standstill, except for isolated attempts of the Austro-German forces to regain long ground. Late reports state that these have been futile.

60 MINUTE FOR FARRAR IN FILMS

NEW YORK, April 28.—The movies have at last invaded grand opera. A film company has engaged Miss Geraldine Farrar to appear in "Carmen," and America's most popular prima donna leaves shortly for Los Angeles, where the play's action is to be staged.

Miss Farrar will leave for California on June 15 in a special car. Her contract with the company covers a period of several seasons, each season to consist of eight weeks.

She is the first of the Metropolitan Opera company stars to appear for the films, but it is learned on very good authority that Antonio Scotti will shortly follow suit.

The Italian baritone will probably appear as Scarpia to Miss Farrar's Tosca. Miss Farrar's salary is said to aggregate more than $2 a minute during the time she is before the camera.

GERALDINE FARRAR,

first of grand opera prima donnas to appear for the "movies."

BURGLAR HUNT ON IN BROOKLINE

A squad of fifteen Brookline police at dawn today began a thorough search of the Lawrence Playgrounds in Brookline, into which disappeared the burglar who was discovered in the home of Clarence E. Thurlow at No. 22 Toxeth street and who escaped three pursuing policemen. Revolver shots were fired in the chase, and the police believe the fugitive was wounded at least once.

The man escaped into the playgrounds last night, and because of the shrubbery there search for him was impossible. Pickets were posted around the outside, however, and at dawn a squad headed by Sergeant John T. Connor began to beat through the shrubbery.

They found no trace of the man, however, and after an hour and a half gave up. It is believed the fugitive escaped to Boston.

The playgrounds are bounded by Francis street, St. Paul street, Longwood avenue and Kent street. Twenty or thirty residents of the fashionable section turned out in the early hours to watch the police search.

FUGITIVE ELUDES POLICE.

The police believe the man sought is a negro, tall and slim. A neighbor of Thurlow saw the man crawl into the kitchen window of Thurlow's apartments and telephoned the police. By this time the man had disappeared inside the apartment. The neighbor raised his own window to watch events, and this noise alarmed the intruder.

The burglar came scrambling out of the window. It happened that two officers saw him at the same moment. Toxteth street runs between Aspinwall avenue and Brook street. Patrolman Charles C. Watterson was on Aspinwall avenue, in plain clothes, and Patrolman Herbert Linn was on Brook street in uniform. The two officers, looking through the backyards, caught a glimpse of the intruder's form and started on the run for the Thurlow house.

The burglar dodged them, skirted the rear of the houses to Aspinwall avenue and so into Harrison street. The pursuers ordered him to stop, and when he kept on running they fired.

SEVERAL SHOTS FIRED.

Several shots woke the neighborhood. Some thought the fugitive returned the fire, but the police deny this.

Patrolman Johnson was on Kent street, heard the shots, and headed for the scene of the trouble. He came into Francis street almost on top of the man, but the runner distanced him, and Johnson also fired some shots.

The burglar disappeared from Johnson's view in the darkness of early morning. The reserves were then called out, and with Sergeants Brogna and Conner in charge every nook and corner of the district was searched.

Is Arraigned for Death of Young Man in Fitchburg

FITCHBURG, April 28. — The defence that he had just been awakened from his first sleep in nearly forty hours, and was mentally irresponsible for the deed, will be offered by Randolph Henderson for the killing, early today, of George Sweeney, whom he shot dead from his chamber window for being one of a party of street brawlers in front of the house.

Henderson was arraigned in police court today, pleaded not guilty and was held till Saturday without bail on a murder charge.

SONS OF ISRAEL TO AID LEO M. FRANK

The movement started in this city for the commutation of the death sentence of Leo M. Frank, the young Cornell University graduate convicted of the murder of Mary Phagan in Atlanta, received a new impetus today when the United States Grand Lodge of the Independent Order Sons of Israel ordered its forty lodges from all over Massachusetts to join in the appeal to Governor Slaton of Georgia. The membership of the lodges in this State is more than 4,000.

ACCUSE IVINS OF MISLEADING ROOSEVELT ON CAMPAIGN FUND

By L. V. B. RUCKER.
Special Correspondent of the International News Service.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., April 28.—The cross-examination of Colonel Theodore Roosevelt in the $50,000 libel suit brought by William Barnes was completed today.

"That's all," said William M. Ivins at 10:14, after the Colonel had admitted making certain speeches throughout New York last October attacking Barnes and alleging his connection with Charles F. Murphy.

During the re-direct examination Bowers accused Ivins of misleading the Colonel by questions on the 1904 contributions.

The forty-five minutes during which Roosevelt was under cross-examination today was taken up with the Colonel's admission that wherever he got a chance to repeat his words he accused Barnes and Murphy of taking from the people the right to govern themselves.

The plaintiff failed to get back to Tennessee Hall and from Counsel Steel and the failure of the latter to enter the prosecution of the New Haven under the Sherman act.

CONSULTED PLATT AS BOSS.

The cross-examination among other things brought out that Colonel Roosevelt, while Governor of New York, Vice-President and President of the United States, considered T. Platt to be the "boss" of the Republican organization and consulted him as such; that his campaign committee in 1904 accepted a campaign fund of millions from various trust magnates, that some of the corporations, the heads of which contributed to the fund, were prosecuted under the Sherman act while Roosevelt was President.

When Mr. Ivins took his seat after saying, "That's all," the colonel had been on the stand 23 hours and 4 minutes.

Immediately Mr. Bowers took up the re-direct examination to offset the admissions the plaintiff drew from the former President. Mr. Bowers took up the matter of campaign contributions.

"You testified, under Mr. Ivins' examination, about the Clapp committee?" asked Mr. Bowers.

"I did," said the witness.

Bowers then read from the record all the testimony given by the colonel on that point.

"Do you remember saying that?"

"I do."

IVINS DEFENDS HONOR.

Mr. Bowers then asked Mr. Roosevelt if he ever saw the report of Mr. Cortelyou on the Republican campaign fund in 1904?

Mr. Ivins objected.

"This witness," said Mr. Bowers, "has been misled by Mr. Ivins. He trusted to Mr. Ivins' assurances."

"This paper from which Mr. Ivins read was not a report at all, as the witness thought it was, but the findings of the Clapp committee."

Mr. Roosevelt's examination by Mr. Ivins frequently said he did not remember about contributions. Mr. Ivins said many time: "Colonel, I'll tell you that this report shows that thus-and-so gave 150,000, would you assume it to be true?" Mr. Roosevelt said he would. On one occasion the witness asked if Mr. Ivins was reading from the official report and Mr. Ivins said he was.

"My honor has been attacked," said Ivins, "by my old friend Mr. Bowers."

"This goes beyond friendship," interposed Mr. Bowers.

"I asked this witness," resumed Mr. Ivins, "certain questions about contributions. He constantly put me on the witness stand and cross-examined me. I told him nothing except what he asked me."

Mr. Barnum laughed.

"This is not a laughing matter, Mr. Barnum," rasped out Mr. Bowers.

The contention of Bowers was that Mr. Roosevelt upon the stand said he knew nothing about the campaign contributions in 1904. Mr. Ivins read from the findings of the Clapp committee and asked Mr. Roosevelt if the list gave certain names and amounts, would he assume them to be correct.

SAYS COLONEL VOLUNTEERED.

Mr. Roosevelt said he would. It then developed that Mr. Ivins was not reading from the Cortelyou report, but from the Clapp committee's finding.

"I misled nobody," shouted Mr. Ivins. "I'll not stand here and be accused of it. If this court will permit the this witness volunteered to me that he got his facts from Mr. Cortelyou and not ask him. He volunteered the information."

Little Newton Girl Liquor Case Witness

A little ten-year-old girl, Esther Bussack, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Bussack of Newton, was the chief witness against Louis Baker, a Newton storekeeper, in the Newton court today. He was charged with keeping liquor for sale. Baker was found guilty and fined $50. He appealed. The Bussack girl testified she purchased a half a pint of whiskey from Baker for her father.

Neutral Police Stops Battle Over Pushcart

Hanover street was flooded with oranges and peanuts today as a result of a row over a push cart.

Harry Herdian, twenty-five, of Moreland street was peacefully pushing his loaded cart along when Salvatore Tazio, nineteen, of South Margin street stopped him.

"That cart was stolen from a friend of mine," said Tazio in Italian.

"I don't understand what you say," said Herdian in Greek.

Then they turned to the natural language of fists. About that time policeman Chester Shaw came along and he fined Herdian eight his overturned cart and push it to the station, and Tazio was hauled along behind charges of assault and battery were lain against them. Tazio claimed the fruit, No. 167, was stolen a week ago. Herdian said he bought it from some Greek for $2.

Spain Prepares for Possible War

By International News Service.

NEW YORK, April 28.—Spain is preparing for possible war. A special commission of the Spanish government, it was learned today, has opened headquarters in New York to buy 250,000,000 cartridges, several thousand war automobiles and a large flotilla of aeroplanes.

The commission is also expected to order a number of submarines. They are to be of two tonnages, a large type for ocean cruising and a smaller craft for the smaller waters of the Mediterranean.

The Bank of Spain has established large deposits for the purchase of war supplies with the National City and First National banks.

There are five Spanish commissioners, Colonel Manuel Rivero Rubin, Captain R. Sarsio and Captain Louis Carlos, of the Spanish army, and Commanders Fernando De Carranza and Julio Mercaderes of the Spanish navy. Colonel Balbin is president of the commission, which has headquarters in the Spanish consulate, No. 15 Broadway.

WEBBER-ADAMS CASE NEARS JURY

Mrs. Gertrude Webber of Somerville, wife of Samuel W. Webber, manager of the Adams House billiard room, who is suing Allen Adams, a Somerville druggist, for $50,000 for the alleged alienation of her affections finished her testimony in the case today. Shortly afterward the taking of evidence ended and the lawyers began their closing arguments. It was expected the case would go to the jury late this afternoon.

Mrs. Webber denied ever having struck her husband. She said he had always had a violent temper, that she had smiled back to him but had never started a quarrel with him. She said she had him arrested once, declaring he had "struck her and cut her lip."

Mrs. Webber denied she ever told Mrs. Mabel A. Kelleher of Dorchester, a short-time boarder, of going to a hotel in Boston with Adams or of intending to keep an appointment with him at another hotel. She denied ever telling Mrs. Kelleher that Adams had given her money, dress goods or an umbrella.

Mrs. Webber denied she had ever received a postcard signed "O. B. D."

"I never saw such a card," she declared.

Mrs. Kelleher was called in rebuttal. She testified that Mrs. Webber once told her that "O. B. D." stood for a joke between Mrs. Webber and Adams and meant "Oh, Be Good."

Mrs. Kelleher said the initials appeared as the signature on a postcard which Mrs. Webber showed her, witness claimed. Mrs. Kelleher continued:

"Mrs. Webber told me she was going to meet Adams at a Boston hotel. That was only two days after the death of Adams' wife. Mrs. Webber asked me if she should keep the appointment. I said that in view of the fact that his wife was dead but two days she ought not to meet him. She once told me Adams had given her a $10 gold piece, a blue serge dress and an umbrella."

FOE REFUSES ENGLISH RUM WAR

PATERSON, N. J., April 28.—"Why" Sunday has abandoned all idea of going to England to engage in a campaign against the liquor traffic.

"I'm not going anywhere to preach here religion is made the side issue," he said. "Of course I'm interested in temperance. I believe it's necessary to the human race. But I'm not strictly a temperance lecturer. I never have been. I've always been an evangelist. My mission is preaching the gospel of Jesus Christ. That's the first thing on my schedule; you can bet your sweet life on that. When I preach, I'm going to preach Jesus, first of all."

Sunday has said all along that he considered it peculiar that all the British churches did not join to the temperance campaign. It is well known he was disappointed when he did not find religion backing the campaign against rum to the limit. This probably influenced him in his decision.

Three hundred and nineteen persons hit the sawdust trail after hearing Sunday preach last night. The attendance at both meetings yesterday was about 12,000, the tabernacle being crowded at night. The heat caused an appreciable reduction in the number that has been attending the afternoon meetings.

At the night service a delegation of 800 members of the Swedish Sunday School Teachers' Association of Greater New York extended a formal invitation to the evangelist to hold a revival in that city.

Paterson is already attributing much to Sunday in the way of moral reclamation. All police cases have decreased 10 per cent. since Sunday began work here Easter day.

MRS. CARMAN TO HAVE NEW COUNSEL

By International News Service.

NEW YORK, April 28.—Preparations for the further prosecution of Mrs. Florence Carman on the charge of having murdered Mrs. Louise Bailey has been going on quietly all Winter, and now on the eve of the second trial William D. Bailey, husband of the murdered woman, does not hesitate to say that he believes there will be a conviction.

The second trial is set for Monday, and a number of sensations are expected from those who are to close the prosecution's case. It is promised that District Attorney Lewis J. Smith, with some of the defence's witnesses at least, will change his tactics and go after them with the tenacity and fierceness of a bulldog.

Harry C. Clock and James M. Seaman, Freeport, L. I., attorneys, have been retained by Mrs. Carman to act with George Morton Levy in her defence.

Messrs. Clock and Seaman succeed John J. Graham, who retired from the case last week.

It is known that the prosecution places a great deal of hope in some new witnesses not called at the first trial who will swear that no one crossed the Carman home grounds immediately after the shooting.

The prosecution's theory of a motive is easily provable. The theory is that Mrs. Carman, listening in her room through the dictagraph to the conversation between her husband, Dr. Edwin Carman, and Mrs. Bailey, had a sudden fit of jealousy.

Mr. Smith expects to prove that no one crossed the front lawn immediately after the shooting, and he has the story of Celia Coleman, the negro maid of Mrs. Carman, that Mrs. Carman entered the house from the rear in great confusion immediately after the shots were fired.

Mrs. Ida Powell, sister of Mrs. Carman, and Elisabeth Carman, now fourteen years old, daughter of the defendant, are two witnesses by whom the prosecution expects to prove a great deal. These two have sworn they were upstairs when the shots were fired and that Mrs. Carman was also upstairs. Mr. Smith expects to adopt drastic tactics in trying to break down their story.

White House Expects Little McAdoo Stranger

WASHINGTON, April 28.—President Wilson expects to become a grandfather again within a month, as a happy event is anticipated at the home of the Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. William G. McAdoo, who is the second daughter of Mr. Wilson. Arrangements for the event are already on the way.

Mr. Wilson became a grandfather last February at the birth in the White House of Francis Sayre, son of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Bowes Sayre. Mrs. Sayre is the youngest daughter of the President. Mr. Wilson will go to Williamstown, Mass., on Friday to attend the christening of his young grandson, which will probably be held on Sunday.

It is believed that the event will occur at the White House, although the McAdoos have a home here, in Massachusetts avenue. It is understood that Mrs. McAdoo will go to the White House for a visit within the next two or three weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. McAdoo were married in the White House on May 7, 1914. Mrs. McAdoo was Miss Eleanor Randolph Wilson, twenty-four. Mr. McAdoo is fifty-two years old and is the father of six children, three sons and three daughters. He also is one time a grandfather.

WOMEN'S PEACE CONGRESS OPENS

By International News Service.

THE HAGUE, April 28.—American women will play a prominent part in the Women's Peace Congress, the formal sessions of which opened here today. Foremost among the leaders in this movement is Miss Jane Addams of Chicago, who will speak for the womanhood of the United States. Special mention was made in addresses today of the heartless of the sittings to the great conflict now raging between the allies and Germans near Ypres, in Belgium, the scene of this gigantic battle being only ninety miles from The Hague.

Approximately 1,000 delegates are here upon their way, representing the United States, Canada, England, Holland, Austria, Denmark, Belgium, Hungary, Norway, Sweden, Chile, Armenia, Italy and Russia.

It is indicated that there will be a strong division of feeling over the wording of the resolutions setting forth the aims and future activities of the gathering. Some of the delegates want the convention to go on record as condemning the war, while others wish to single out certain countries for the strongest condemnation.

A few of the delegates regard England's entrance into the hostilities as "A noble act of sacrifice," while some oppose any such specific mention.

Fish and Game Junket Trip Declared Off

Alas and alack for the tribulations of the legislative Committee on Fisheries and Game.

Its junket to the game farm at Wilbraham has been called off.

Just before the committee was scheduled to leave the State House for its trip the members were summoned before President Coolidge of the Senate and Speaker Cox of the House. Rumors had reached the ears of the President and Speaker that the committee, instead of taking the short route to Wilbraham by way of Palmer planned to go on to Springfield, there to stop last night and enjoy the social life of the western metropolis.

The committee confessed that it was all too true, admitting also that the tickets to Springfield had been procured and that reservation had been made at one of the hotels.

President Coolidge and Speaker Cox insisted that it was not the duty of the committee to inspect Springfield game, but the State-owned game a Wilbraham. After solemn conclave the committee delivered its ultimatum, "No Springfield, no trip," and the trip, therefore, is abandoned.

Zoe---The Story of a Great Love

Crawley Finds That His Painting of "Circe" Is to Be Shown to the Public

(Copyright, Associated Newspapers, Ltd. Serial rights in U. S. A. held by International News Service.)

(By CORALIE STANTON and HEATH HOSKEN.)

CRAWLEY ceased in his work, and for a moment held his destructive hand as he surveyed the holocaust of some of the finest work he or any of his contemporaries had accomplished.

"Hutton," he said moodily, "oblige me by saying nothing whatever about this. You understand?"

"Certainly, sir; but surely——"

"Not a word, Hutton. I have my own reasons—good reasons. Get me a chisel."

"Yes, sir."

The man obeyed in a dazed, half comprehending fashion. His master frightened him by his strange manner. He sincerely hoped that the great Noel Crawley had not gone mad. He had heard that genius was akin to madness and all the world knew that Crawley was a genius.

"You can go now, Hutton," said the artist when the man had brought the chisel. "I shall be ready for lunch in about five minutes."

Hutton left reluctantly. He did not at all like the look of things, and the thought of all that valuable work being burnt was very irritating.

As for Crawley, he wasted no further time. He did not allow himself to think. The thing had to be done, and the sooner it was done the better. He took the canvas of "Circe" from its frame and slit it into strips and threw them on the fire. He destroyed the "Sleeping Venus" in the same way, and, indeed, every picture—oil, study or sketch—of Zoe. When he had completed his work he went into his dining room. Hutton was awaiting him. He thought his master looked very white and ill and suggested some brandy. Crawley gulped down a large glass.

"CIRCE" IS TO BE SHOWN IN PUBLIC EXHIBITION

"You need not trouble to wait, Hutton," he said wearily. "Just bring me my letters and go clear up the mess I have made in the studio."

Hutton returned with the unopened letters and retired. Crawley drew a deep, shuddering breath of relief.

"Thank heaven that's done!" he said to himself.

And he took up a postcard from the pile of letters Hutton had laid beside him.

It was an advertisement. He glanced at it in absent-mindedly, and a startled exclamation burst from his lips.

"Heaven," he gasped, "I must be mad! I had forgotten!"

He read the printed matter on the back of the postcard. It ran as follows:

"Leveredge Gallery,
"Bond street, W.

"Messrs. Leveredge and Maberley beg to announce that Mr. Noel Crawley's famous picture 'Circe' is now on exhibition at the gallery.

"Admission 1s. Your patronage is respectfully invited."

And Brooke and his wife might be in Bond street at that very moment.

The printed words danced before the artist's eyes. Something seemed to snap in his brain. All power of coherent thought and action left him. It was fate. There was no fighting against fate. Of a surety Noel Crawley's nerves had all gone to pieces.

Of what use had been the work of the last hour—the work of destruction, the holocaust of his drawings and paintings? Here, advertised freely, open to anyone with the combination and a shilling to spare, was "Circe," the portrait of Zoe, of Mrs. Godfrey Brooke.

Thousands of people would be bound to see the picture. They would, in all assumption, of course, that Messrs. Leveredge and Maberley had paid him a thousand pounds for the picture. And among the thousands, and probably tens of thousands, of people who would visit the Leveredge Gallery during the next two or three months it was inevitable that there would be Godfrey Brooke.

And then?

Crawley's brain reeled. He felt suddenly almost physically sick. To the world the picture was Circe, the symbol of the classic myth, Circe, daughter of the Sol and Perseus, who, with magic potion of venomous herbs turned Ulysses and the Trojan warriors into swine; Circe, the Nymph of Aeea.

To Crawley she had been the incarnation of the myth, the symbol, even as Zoe had been to him the incarnation of many things. But to Brooke, her husband? What would it be to him?

It was before this question that he dared not answer that Crawley bowed his head with a fear that could not be measured, a shame that was unnameable, for in the last few hours the artist had become the man. Zoe was no longer Zoe, but the wife of his old friend and benefactor, and Circe was no longer the Sorceress of Aeea, but Mrs. Godfrey Brooke.

But that was not all, although, Heaven knew, that was bad enough, since the portrait was startling and lifelike, despite the spirit of sin and the symbolism of the Hellenic legend he had infused into the painting, which gave it its subtle, if somewhat morbid fascination.

ANYONE WOULD KNOW HER IN THE "CIRCE"

Anyone who knew Mrs. Godfrey Brooke would have recognized Crawley's Circe. That, as he realized, was bad enough, but it was the other thing that was so damning. It was the fact that Brooke would know that Circe was Zoe, and knew the story of Zoe. Crawley might have painted Zoe's portrait in the most conventional manner, painted her as a saint or as Madonna of the Lilies, as, indeed, he had done, but it would make no difference, because if Brooke saw the picture he would recognize his wife, and in the same instant realize that she was Zoe, the woman who loved Crawley.

Whether Zoe had ever loved her husband, Crawley could not say, and his thoughts were too much occupied to trouble about that question. One thing, however, was very certain, and that was that Brooke firmly believed she loved him now, that she was all his life so was he all hers.

Brooke was the sort of man who would have defended that thesis with his life, the sort of man who, did he know the ghastly truth, would have killed her without mercy. Crawley knew it, and quailed as a man may quail before the wrath of God, for Brooke was no ordinary man.

There was something very grim about Brooke, something terrible and primitive. He had lived his life among stern realities, facing death so often that he and death were almost good friends. His life and experience had imbued him with a sage's disregard of human life. Brooke feared principles and worshipped ideals. He looked into the future and did his level best to make realities of the ideals. That was a great thing to Brooke—life as a whole—but he had little care for the life of the human unit.

He had shot men down by the score in free and fair fight. He had judicially sent offending natives to destruction without so much as a thought beyond the broken law and the necessity of stern and impartial justice.

Crawley knew all this—none better.

And as Brooke was in his impersonal and more or less official side, so he was when affairs touched him closely. There was no sentiment in the making of the man; at least, Crawley had never suspected it, yesterday, when the grim, weather-tanned pioneer had spoken of home and wife. Perhaps that made it the more terrible.

And Brooke was rather terrible. He was a power, giant among his fellows. Men had learned long ago not to get in Brooke's way, and when a man got in Brooke's way Brooke soon removed the obstacle, and the manner of its removal was as swift as it was efficacious.

To be up against Brooke was to be promptly broken. Everyone knew that. When Brooke said a thing no one, save a madman, disbelieved when Brooke set his mind on a certain thing men found it her to say no and in his schemes than to set up in opposition.

It was, in fact, the working out of the law of self preservation. It enabled many quite incapable and insignificant people to come to the front, to make fortunes and to gain fame. So long as Brooke stood with Brooke, Brooke grudged them nothing. Opposition was all he resented, and he possessed in full degree the truth of Herbert's words: "A dwarf sees farther than a giant when he has the giant's shoulders to mount on."

Deceit and treachery were the other two anathemas to the great pioneer. Opposition, open, honorable, either was to Brooke an unpardonable offense. Several grim stories had come through the little man period of how Brooke had dealt with traitors. Crawley remembered not so very long ago a violent agitation in the newspapers over some so-called atrocity story in connection with one of Brooke's expeditions and he shuddered. There had been a question in the House of Commons, letters in the Times and semi-official denials. Ultimately had come a cablegram from Brooke himself couched in the following terms:

"Report quite true. I take all responsibility. I executed the woman myself. I know what I am doing.

—BROOKE."

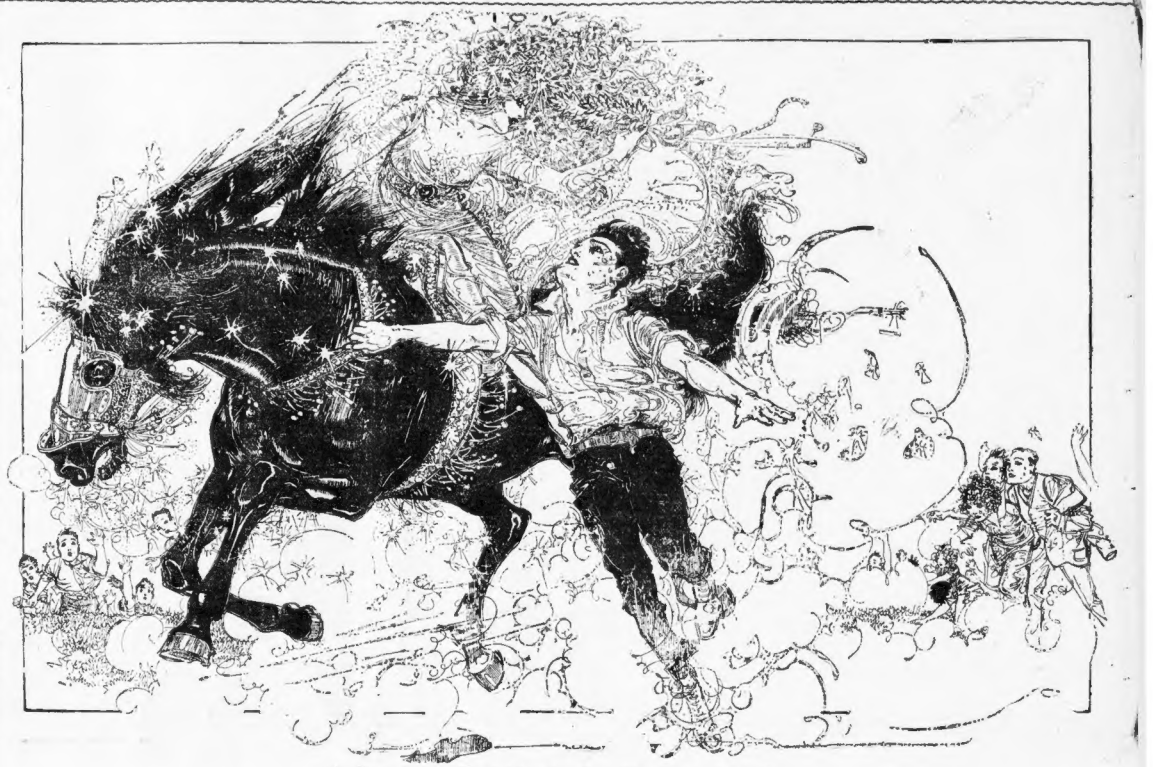
"The Faery Woman"

(AMBITION)

By NELL BRINKLEY

Copyright, 1918, by International News Service.



She Never Appears Wonderful to You, Even When You've Caught Her

THERE was a faery-woman a great poet sang of—the Faery-Woman, "La Belle Dame Sans Merci." The riding Knight questing through the woods and vales of the Land of Romance came upon her unaware. And that was his madness! For looking once into her wild eyes, lighted with sorcery, he set her on his pacing horse—and all day long he walked by her side, his neck bent back—listening enchanted to the magic song she sang. A faery-song.

Here in these days, too—these days of the wildest Romance and the strangest Reality—we have our Faery-Woman. And think hard before you choose to shut the door of your home-gate and wander out into the highways. The Faery-Woman AMBITION rides a winged horse that scours the country-and-city side and sets a pace that kills!

She runs with Time, and that's fast! Holding his forelock—casting her bright eyes here and over there for the strained faces that mean "I want success and the laurel wreath!" the Faery-Woman rides, the very stars out of the night-sky in her hair and quilted in diamond-dust behind her; her eyes compelling, hot and sweet, answering all questions, holding all things—the eyes of a sorceress and a sweetheart; and high in her hand she carries the laurel-wreath of Fame.

The whole world of man—and woman, too—rises up, rips off its coat and its tie and collar, bares arms and throat, pushes the hair back from its forehead, and pursues her. Some sit down in a fume long before they ever catch up with her—and there are some that whisper that that is just as well. "For women," says my cynic, "they can't chase Love and Ambition, too—and most times they wish they'd taken Love when they are choking in the dust that rolls beside Ambition's steed!" What do you think? Some drop down in the road, wrung and weary in heart and body—to take up the chase later on.

But the chap who catches up with her! Who gets one deep look in her eyes, one breath of its odor of her veiling hair, who gets one clutching hand tight in the leather of her horse's trappings, who feels the whip of her white garment on his shoulder and throat! What about him? You'd think his race is done! That Ambition takes him up beside her—or drops into a walk and turns to rose-grown paths where he can cool his hot head and walk in dreams. But it isn't so.

Ambition's great black horse never slows! And the man who gets his grip in his mane and his head beneath her Laurel-wreath, and his eyes fastened in hers, must hold the pace to stay there!

Once I thought Fame was a high pinnacle far away from everybody, lifted high, and, though it was sharp and narrow and dangerous, once up there you sat above the roar, secure and at rest if only you held on! But I know better now. Fame is only a green-wreath held in the hand of a flying woman who thunders through our very crowded streets with flying hair and whipping garment and a madness in her eyes, who calls you to pursue and holds you beside her in the madness that you drink from her eyes, who never slacks or waits; and I know now that once you have come abreast with her and got your hold, you must run like fury 'til you die to stay there.

Which will you have, little girl who wrote to me some days ago to know if you should leave your garden-gate and go in search for the Faery-Woman? "I have a little talent," you ventured. Do you want to stay at home and hang on your garden-gate and wait for Love—for you know he doesn't hurry and he[illegible] you out—to walk with him and settle in a little house off the great highway where all the busy things are doing and mobs are rising up at the thunder of the black-horse's flying feet? Or do you want to be out in the whirlpool race for the stars that fly from Ambition's galloping shape?

There are those with the madness in their veins—you, my, "it is worth all weariness" to run spell-bound, eyes fastened in glittering eyes, in the light and the whirl and the gasping glory, hand on the saith-coat of a Faery-Horse, star-spikes blowing and stinging, the wonder-green of the Faery-Wreath above, and the Faery-Woman leaning sidewise, singing a Faery-Song that lures you to strain on. CHOOSE!

THOU ART LIKE A FLOWER.

(From the German of Heinrich Heine)

Ah, Love, you are a flower,
So fair, so sweet, so pure;
I think in sacred wonder
Of storms you must endure.
With hands upon your brow, dear,
I'd breathe a silent prayer
That God in His Heaven will keep you
So sweet, so pure, so fair.

A Man and His Wife

By Virginia Terhune Van de Water

CHAPTER XXXIX.

Copyright, 1918, by the Star Company.

WHEN one has entertained extravagantly there is certain to come a day of reckoning. Such a day came the first of the week following the Hamiltons' dinner-party. It chanced also to be the first of the month.

Several bills had arrived that day. The Hamiltons did not carry many charge accounts, but just now they seemed many to the young wife. As a rule she paid cash for her various purchases. Last week she had been unable to do this, for there has been numerous "extras." She had, therefore, told her butcher and grocer to let the accounts stand until Monday, the first of the month. On the first John always gave her her housekeeping allowance.

So she took it as only natural when, after dinner, her husband drew a roll of bills from his pocket. "Here's your allowance," he said.

"Thank you." Mechanically she began to count the money. John had told her she should always do that. He had said it was the proper and businesslike thing to do. In the middle of the roll of bills was a quarter. She looked up inquiringly.

"You've made a mistake, dear, haven't you?" she asked. "Here's a quarter that must have slipped in with the bills—and the bills themselves are about six dollars short."

"I kept out the money for the liquors I bought for the dinner party," John explained. "They amounted to five seventy-five—and that's the quarter change from six dollars. Of course," he added, hastily, "I did not deduct the money for the cigars. That part of the affair was my business—not yours."

"But John," she protested, "I did not expect to pay for the wines and cocktails out of my allowance, for they were certainly your affair—not mine. I expected to get a light claret—one can get a good St. Julien for a dollar. I hardly think it's fair that I should pay for what I did not want and disapproved of."

John tried to smile at her distress. "Poor child!" he said, "things always cost more than one thinks they should, don't they? But really none of that crowd would have cared for your St. Julien at a dollar a quart. So we simply had to have the other stuff, that's all. And surely they were a part of the dinner."

"But it is not fair," Isabel persisted. "I didn't get them for myself."

"No, nor did you get any of the food especially for yourself," John reasoned. "But you surely expected to pay for it from your allowance."

"Yes, for the food I did," she acknowledged, "but not for the wines."

"Come, come," John said indulgently, "don't be so stubborn. I tell you what I'll do—I'll pay for the cocktails—since your special objection was to them. That adds a dollar and a quarter to what you have there. Here it is," drawing the money from his pocket and handing it to her. "Now you are out only fourfifty for drinks. That's not much."

"It would more than pay for my flowers, my nuts, bonbons and other refreshments," she declared.

A knock at the door precluded the necessity of a reply to this statement. Jennie entered with the evening mail. It consisted of a circular for Mr. Hamilton and an envelope bearing the stamp of a Broadway florist. This was addressed to Mrs. Hamilton.

John looked up in surprise at an exclamation from his wife. "What's the matter?" he asked. "What have you got there? Nothing wrong, is there?"

"It's the florist's bill," she said. "And he's made a mistake in it. I have ordered from him only the flowers for our dinner—daffodils, you know. And here he's charged me with roses at two-fifty a dozen."

"Let's see the bill!" John held out his hand for it. "I'll stop in and see about it tomorrow and tell him it's a mistake."

"Why should you?" the wife asked. "When I go to market in the morning I'll drop into the store and have him correct it."

"Tend better let me do it," John urged.

His face was flushed and his wife looked at him curiously. He was folding up the bill preparatory to putting it into his pocket.

"Give it to me, please," she said, reaching across the little table for it.

"Why?" he parried. "I can attend to it in the morning. Why should you be bothered about it?"

"It is not that I prefer to do it myself," she insisted. "Please give it to me."

He returned it reluctantly, and she looked at it again.

"Let's see," she mused. "What date does he charge those roses for? Oh! for Sunday—last Sunday. I don't see how he could have made such an absurd mistake."

The flush on John's face deepened. Why did he look so embarrassed? A suspicion stabbed her like a knife.

"John," she said slowly, conviction growing upon her as she saw that he avoided her gaze, "John, tell me, don't you know anything about those roses?"

"Well, what if I do?" he blustered. "Surely have a right to buy flowers if I want to! Yes, since you are so inquisitive, I will tell you I did buy those roses. I got them for a friend.

A Strange Bill for Roses Comes in and Isabel Finds That John Ordered Them

I found that I did not have the money for them with me and I told the darned fool of a florist to send me the bill. He must have gotten your order mixed with mine. The chump!"

"But," she faltered, "the roses—were they for a friend?"

"Yes," defiantly, "they were for Adelaide Simmons's birthday last Sunday. Some of her friends always spend the evening of her birthday with her, and as I couldn't go this year I sent her some roses instead, for I could not accept her invitation."

"Could not accept?" Isabel repeated the words dully. "Why?"

"Because," he rejoined bitterly, "I am married. And a married man's time is not his own."

How Thin People Can Get Fat
Increase in Weight Ten Pounds or More
A Physician's Advice
"I'd certainly give most anything to be able to fat up a few pounds and stay that way," declares every excessively thin man or woman, and as a result is not impossible, despite past failures. Thin people are victims of mal-nutrition, a condition which prevents the fatty elements of food from being taken up by the blood as they are when the powers of nutrition are normal. Instead of getting into the blood, all the fat and flesh producing elements stay in the intestines until they pass from the body as waste.
To correct this condition and to produce a healthy, normal amount of fat the nutritive processes must be artificially supplied with the power which nature has denied them. This can best be accomplished by eating a Sargol tablet with every meal. Sargol is a scientific combination of six of the best strength-giving, fat-producing elements known to the medical profession. Taken with meals, it mixes with the food and turns the sugars and starches into rich, ripe nourishment for the tissues and blood and its rapid effect is remarkable. Reported gains of from ten to twenty-five pounds in a single month are by no means infrequent. Yet its action is perfectly natural and absolutely harmless. Sargol is sold by good druggists everywhere and every package contains a guarantee of weight increase or money back.
Caution—While Sargol has produced remarkable results in the treatment of nervous indigestion and general stomach disorders, it should not, owing to its remarkable flesh producing effect, be used by those who are not willing to increase their weight ten pounds or more.

DUVAL WEST TO REPORT ON MEXICO

By International News Service.

WASHINGTON, April 28.—The administration is looking to Duval West, the President's personal representative, to bring a report of the real situation in Mexico, it was learned today.

So many and conflicting accounts have reached Washington from various sources that doubt has arisen in the minds of officials as to the true state of affairs in the southern republic.

West is on his way from Mexico City, and is expected to come direct to Washington from Vera Cruz. The rival Mexican juntas here have developed a merry battle of bulletins. Each has installed a large press staff, and statements claiming victories for each side are issued daily. Guadalajara is occupied by both sides, if the claims of the juntas be true.

Phil E. McCleary, the American newspaperman who was said to be imprisoned and sentenced to be shot by Carranza at Vera Cruz, is reported to have arrived in Galveston today on the steamship City of Tampico from Vera Cruz. McCleary declares that he was never in any trouble at Vera Cruz. He says he is employed by the official press bureau of the Carranzistas and is en route to Chicago for that bureau.

GLASS OF SALTS CLEANS KIDNEYS

If your Back hurts or Bladder bothers you, drink lots of water.

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts which removes the body's urinous waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from 15 000 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glas of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this, also keep the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.—Advertisement.

"Princess" Eloper Tells of Romance With Yale Student Eluded His Relatives

Mrs. Donald Shields Andrews, who eloped with Yale senior, and her six-year-old boy Rudolph. She was formerly Mrs. Alma V. Hayne, and calls herself an Austrian Princess.

Mrs. Donald Shields Andrews Gives Details of a Midnight Runaway.

By International News Service.

NEW YORK, April 28.—Mrs. Donald Shields Andrews, the former Mrs. Alma V. Hayne, who sometimes calls herself Princess Alma Vetsera of Austria, today told of the midnight elopement by which her new husband, a Yale senior, eluded his father, mother and detectives and married her at Manamaneck.

"Betty Strong was my dearest chum," she said. "Donald is a dear boy. They were engaged. I never had met him until last Sunday night one week ago, but I knew all about their affair. He came to se me with a letter of introduction from Betty their affair. He came to see me with him."

The bride said that one hour after Mr. Andrews had walked into her studio with the letter from Betty Mr. Andrews told her his engagement to Miss Strong had been broken. On Monday he asked her to marry him.

"I guess I must have loved him very much," the bride said with a smile, "because I at once got into communication with Cleveland to find out if Betty and Donald really had parted.

"I got word over the phone on Friday that Betty and Donald were no longer engaged. Meanwhile I could not stir without being followed by detectives. I could not understand all the mystery, but on Saturday we decided to slip out of town and be married.

"We waited until evening and drove out of the city in Mr. Andrews' automobile. The detectives followed us, but we gave them the slip and went to Manamoneck. A justice of the peace married us. Here—want to see the certificate?"

It was reported today that the bridegroom's father has forgiven the pair and will not revise his will, in which the younger Mr. Andrews figures prominently.

Sheehan Will Fight Hampden in B. & M. Bill

Senator John F. Sheehan of Holyoke declared today that the Hampden Railroad would meet an unyielding opposition in the Senate when the final stage of the Boston & Maine bill was reached.

"There is no logical reason why the Hampden should be included in the reorganization of the Boston & Maine," said Senator Sheehan, "and I will fight the entire bill until the Hampden is eliminated."

"Coming from Holyoke, where the exploits of the Hampden are a matter of history, I am somewhat familiar with the situation; he said. "The Hampden has broken faith with Chicopee and Holyoke and has been enriched by graft and corruption from its earliest history."

Senator Sheehan says that he favors the reorganization bill as a whole, but is prepared to combat it in its entirety unless the Hampden is stricken out.

DUNCAN SAYS WAR AIDS COTTON MEN

President Albert G. Duncan of the National Association of Cotton Manufacturers, which met at the Copley-Plaza today at its annual two days' convention, in his addressing opening the convention declared that the European war in a financial sense was a blessing in disguise for the cotton manufacturers. He said:

That our industry has continued solvent, and that we have seen a gradual bettering of trade from the utter prostration of last Fall, is a record of which we may be heartily proud.

We are, however, only beginning an improvement which we hope will be real and substantial. Since the outbreak of the war the trade balance has increased in our favor and since the first of January gold has begun to return to us.

We are exporting today a hundred million dollars a month more than we import, and with a continuance of present conditions this country will attain within a very short time a financial independence in the money markets of the world which it never before enjoyed.

Several hundred of the most prominent cotton manufacturers of the country are here for the convention, which deals principally with technical topics of the trade.

Seen on Stroll With Girl, Gives Up His Pulpit

MONROE, N. Y., April 28.—There were no services in the Christian Church here Sunday because it was explained today, the Rev. Walter Scott, the young pastor, had been seen walking in the wood with a young woman member of he church.

Legally and morally th trustees admitted it was not wrng for a young pastor to stroll tough the woods on a bright spring day with a young woman, but—so here is where the communicas of the church have been busy ith gossip for several days—everything depends upon how he was strolling.

The affidavits submitted to the trustees by Alva Hunt and his wife, upright and rigid members of the church, have not been made public, but E. G. Smith and John H. Sutton, trustees, said it was no way for a clergyman to stroll with a girl. Therefore they submitted a motion at a meting of all the trustees that Mr. Scott be asked to resign. Before a vote could be taken a friend of the clergyman read his resignation.

FAVORS GUARD OF HONOR FOR JOURNEY OF LIBERTY BELL

By WINIFRED BLACK.

General Nelson A. Miles, U. S. A., retired, and Mrs. William Cumming Story, national president of the Daughters of the American Revolution, have both announced themselves as enthusiastically in favor of a special guard of honor to accompany the Liberty Bell on its splendid journey across the continent.

General Miles suggests that the bell and the car upon which it is carried be draped, not only in the national flag, but with the colors of the original thirteen colonies.

Mrs. Story says she considers it a high honor for any one to be asked to serve as an escort to the Liberty Bell on its patriotic mission.

Why, it's going to be a regular family reunion, that Liberty Bell of ours—a family reunion with the poor relations right at the head of the table and none of the ill-tempered old aunts or disagreeable old uncles in evidence at all.

Let's have the colors of the thirteen colonies by all means—and let's have the very finest people in the whole country represent that guard of honor—and let's begin now, right now, telling our children the story of the Liberty Bell and what it means to us—and to them, and to the whole world.

Let's have a new baptism of patriotism and loyalty and pride in our glorious history.

Let's knit together the whole nation as it has never been knit before, and let's realize, as we never have stopped, realized, to realize that the love of country means the love of home and the love of home means the love of the family—and that these things we might as well stop pretending to be human beings and go back to the cave dweller's time and be brutes again.

NEED FAITH RENEWAL.

There never was a time in the history of our country when we needed a renewal of the old faith and the old loyalty and the old patriotism as we need it today.

Do you remember the picture of the woman with her back against the door and her little family of children gathered close around her—and outside the wolf snarls with glaring eyes upon the doorstep? How they clung together, the children at the woman's feet.

They may have quarrelled on the morning of that very day—they may have fought, even, over some trifle that seemed for the moment a matter of vital importance—but now—with a common danger threatening them all—how close they came, how they drew together.

The wolf is at our very door today—the wolf of hatred and envy and discontent and disloyalty—the whole world is trembling with its snarl—come let us draw close together, we children of the same mother, here in our quiet homes at peace and in prosperity, let us draw close together and laugh at the efforts of the world to frighten us.

Did you ever see your country's flag when you were in a foreign land?

How hard you had to swallow at the sight of the stripes and of the stars—were you ashamed of the tears that came so suddenly to your eyes?

Weren't you a better man and a better citizen and a better living being for that moment of involuntary thrilling loyalty to the flag that our fathers fought for years ago?

TEACHES A LESSON.

Must we go abroad to find out what America really means to every American citizen?

Can't we be patriotic unless the cannon is roaring at our very doors?

Let us teach the children that loyalty means something besides killing—something besides trenches and prisons and a dreadful death.

Let's teach them that there is something in the world that is sacred—something that we venerate—we Americans—who venerate so little.

Not because it is old, the Liberty Bell—not because it is a wonder and a strange thing to see and to tell of seeing—but because of what it stands for in the world today.

Where would we be, we people here in this free country of ours if the Liberty Bell had not rung out its message when it did?

Where are we going to be in the next few generations if we let it slip away from us—the old faith, the old loyalty, the old ideals?

Once, I came up the great bay of New York on a ship loaded down with human beings.

And all the way across we, in the first cabin, had amused ourselves by watching the immigrants on the steerage deck below.

They were very poor, the immigrants, and they wore strange clothes and many of them looked like simple animals.

But they played strange games together and sang weird songs and sometimes on moon-light nights they danced upon the deck. And we leaned upon the upper rail and looked at them and were sorry for them and wondered at them and felt very superior and very patronizing about them.

On the day we sailed into the bay of New York we found tape, one or two of us, to stop at the old rail again and look down into the steerage—and there they were—the new Americans—crowded together upon the deck, so thick that there was scarce breathing room.

STANDS FOR IDEALS.

And they are all craning their necks eagerly for the sight of something which a tall man was trying to point out to them.

The tall man had a little boy on his shoulder—and he raised him eagerly a little higher.

"See," he said, "look, Beppo—see, little Anunciata—there is the Statue of Liberty—we are in American now—and you two are as good as any of those upstairs there"—and the tall man showed his white teeth in a flashing of upward smile.

And all the talking and chattering and the laughing down below on the immigrant deck stopped, as if an angel had spoken—and every hat came off every man's head and some of the women cried and were not ashamed.

A Russian Jew, for such I knew him by his dress to be, put his arms around a white-haired old woman who was traveling with him and said something in a voice choken with happy tears and she leaned closer to the breast of her son and laughed aloud for sheer joy.

As for little Beppo and his sister, Anunciata, they blessed themselves, and nobody in all that crowd there laughed to see them do it, for they all felt a something in there—for they were looking upon the Statue of Liberty Enlightening the World.

PIMPLES ITCHED AND BURNED ON FACE

Scratched and in Week Began to Form on Cheat and Neck. Itched So Could Not Sleep. Used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. Entirely Well.

166 E. 127th St., New York, N. Y.—"My trouble first began when I noticed one or two pimples on my face. I scratched and irritated them and within a week they began to form on my chest and neck. They were red and my scratching and irritating started the spreading, and very shortly after it was almost covered with them. They itched and burned so I could not sleep.

"I bought one of ——— cures which I used for nine days, but they afforded me no relief. At last I read of one healed by the Cuticura Soap and Ointment and sent for a free sample. I at once applied them and I was surprised to find the itching and awful burning much relieved. I sent for a cake of Cuticura Soap and a box of Ointment. I first washed my face with the Soap and then applied the Ointment, and in two weeks the pimples began to disappear. At the end of another week with constant use of Cuticura Soap and Ointment I was entirely well." (Signed) Cortis F. Simmons, Dec. 1, 1914.

All Germs Ordered To Beat it!—Git!

Searching Influence of a Remedy That Works Wonders.

The introduction of S. S. S. is at once a command to blood impurities to find a way out.

And what are blood impurities? They may be the hypersecretions found in the mucous linings of the body; they may be acid accumulations known as rheumatism; they may be boils, pimples, eczema, acne and stubborn, indolent sores.

If they are examined closely, they are all germs that have gotten the upper hand and it requires the flushing influence of S. S. S. to drive them out. And out they go when S. S. S. begins to circulate in the blood. It only requires five minutes to begin this influence, for it is a fact that in this limited time S. S. S. may be traced in the urine. In the perspiration, in the efflorescence from the lungs, to show that it is at work. Germs, mind you, are of various kinds, but all are destroyed by S. S. S. and it is no respecter of destructive germs. It drives them all out, of whatsoever name they go by. Just get a bottle of S. S. S. of any druggist and soon you will observe a decided change. And if yours is a stubborn case, write to the Medical Advisor, care of The Swift Specific Co., 107 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga. He is a regular physician, proud of his name by virtue of his distinguished family and is recognized as a foremost physician on his own merit.

TODAY'S STOCK MARKET

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor

Stocks were in great demand when markets opened today, and prices today and prices quickly worked upward. The U. S. Steel report was regarded as a bull factor because it shows that the industrial situation has steadily improved so far this year. There was a brisk advance in Interborough-Metropolitan issues as a result of the formal announcement of the details of its management's plans. The rise of Studebaker was based statements as to a distribution of its common stock.

Among the early gains in New York were U. S. Steel ¼, American Locomotive 1¼, American Car & Foundry 1⅝, Studebaker 2, Maxwell Motor 1, Westinghouse 2⅛, Atchison ⅛, Chino ⅜, N. Y. Central ⅛, Utah Copper ½ and Union Pacific ⅛. Declines included Central Leather ⅛ and Canadian Pacific ½.

In Boston, Alaska Gold was up ⅝ and other gains included Alloues 1, Butte & Superior 1⅜, Calumet & Arizona 1, Calumet & Hecla 5, Granby ⅜, North Butte ⅝, United Fruit ⅜, Wolverine 16, American Zinc ⅜ and Hancock 1.

U. S. STEEL REPORT.

The report of the U. S. Steel Corporation for the first quarter of this year was better than was expected after what Chairman Gary recently said regarding the condition of the steel industry. Net earnings of $12,457,893 were an improvement over $10,933,176, which was the showing for the last three months in 1914. Incidentally it was the poorest quarter for the Steel Corporation in its history. The record of the first 1915 quarter shows how the steel trade has improved, and it is a barometer for the business of the country. In January last the Steel Corporation's net totalled only $1,687,158, but February profits amounted to $3,453,578 and those for last month were $7,132,881. A good showing for this month is predicted.

MILLS RESUMING WORK.

From almost all manufacturing districts in the country come reports of industrial plants resuming or increasing operation. It is stated that the U. S. Steel Corporation is now working at about 70 per cent. of capacity. Leaving aside the textile and other mills which are busy at present filling war orders, there is a steady increase in the business of many others which have not benefitted because of the great conflict in Europe. There is, in fact, indications of a great revival of demand for domestic products of every description.

FINANCIAL NEWS IN BRIEF.

It is stated at Pittsburgh that the National Tube plant will soon be working at 75 per cent. capacity.

It is expected that the April tonnage of Butte & Superior's Black Rock mill will break all records.

The net operating revenue of the Chicago & Alton Road for March increased $106,845. The gain by Western Maryland for that month was $198,698.

LEADERS PRAISE CREDIT UNION IDEA

Arthur H. Ham, director of the division of remedial loans of the Russell Sage Foundation, New York, speaking at the dinner of the Massachusetts Credit Union at the Boston City Club, declared that "In 1909, when Massachusetts enacted her credit union law, there were 10,000 unions operating abroad with an annual turnover of about $1,000,000,000.

"Japan alone," he said, "had nearly 2,000 unions in 1909, and the little country of Roumania, where the movement started in 1902, had in 1909 2,500 unions with a membership of 350,000 or 25 per cent. of the total population of the country. In that year there was not a single co-operative credit union, rural or urban, in the United States.

"Massachusetts was the first held under the auspices of the organization, of which Felix Vorenberg is president and Max Mitchell, treasurer. Plans were laid for 200. Seated at the speaker's table were: Governor Walsh, Mayor Curley, Felix Vorenberg, Edward A. Filene, Augustus P. Thorndike, Bank Commissioner of Massachusetts; Bernard J. Rothwell, former president of the Boston Chamber of Commerce; James W. Rearden of the Boston AMERICAN; J. D. Williams, Henry Abrahams, J. J. Brown, P. J. Reilly, Charles E. Ware, Jr., Rabbi Harry Levi, Max Mitchell, Arthur H. Ham of New York, Walter D. Quint of the Boston Post, Judge A. K. Cohen, F. L. Shaw, J. K. Allen, Robert Lincoln O'Brien, Henry Sterling and S. L. Heckt.

Felix Vorenberg was toast-master. In opening the speaking part of the program he was given an enthusiastic reception, three cheers and a tiger. It was some minutes before he was able to speak. He said:

"I thank you for this cordial greeting which you have given me, I assure you I appreciate it very much. I just want to say a few words about the Massachusetts Credit Union. It was organized in February, 1914, with a capital of $10,000 raised by public-spirited citizens who cared very little for the interest, which was at the rate of 6 per cent.

"Conferences were held. After a number of such meetings we decided to raise the money by public subscription. Every cent which we set out to raise has been secured according to the Ways and Means Committee, and the organization is still intact."

Isaac Isadore Gordon, president of the Lawrence Credit Union, gave an idea of the workings of his organization. John F. Du Bois, president of the French-Canadian Credit Union of Worcester, told of that organization. Augusto Franchesci of the Cosmopolitan Credit Union and Charles Alden of the Boston & Maine Credit Union enumerated many benefits to members of their organizations.

"This meeting is an inspiration," said Governor Walsh. "I cannot tell you how pleased I am to know that such a movement for the benefit of humanity has been inaugurated so successfully in this great State of Massachusetts of which I have the honor to be the chief executive. I do not know of any movement that impresses me so deeply. I commend this organization publicly. Such men as Mr. Vorenberg, Mr. Filene, Mr. Mitchell, Judge Cohen and others deserve great praise for taking part in this most meritorious movement.

Mayor Curley made a stirring address on the pay-as-you-go policy of his administration.

Edward A. Filene said: "The credit unions' movement appeals to me tremendously since I saw it working in Sofia in 1907."

Scriabin, Composer, Dead.

MOSCOW, via London, April 28.—Alexander Nicholaievich Scriabin, Russian pianist and composer, is dead of blood poisoning, a slight wound on his face having become infected.

FELIX VORENBERG, president of the Massachusetts Credit Union.

MAY SAVE FALZONE FROM THE CHAIR

On recommendation of a majority of the Parole Board, Governor Walsh has decided to ask the Executive Council to commute to life imprisonment the death sentence pronounced on Ghigio Falzone, condemned to die the week of May 3 for the murder of Maurice A. Albertson of Lawrence, a jewelry peddler, who was killed at Wakefield, December 28, 1914, and a hearing was to be given the case today.

The report of the Parole Board cites the fact that two others were implicated in the murde

The Short Cut to Pipe-Joy

If you have squandered your youth looking for smoke joy among the desolating peppergrass brands, come over in our yard and try a pipe o' good old Prince Albert. Or, if you like yours rolled into a little paper pipe, smoke it your way, but make it of P. A. There's no two guesses about the pleasingness and goodness of the national joy smoke

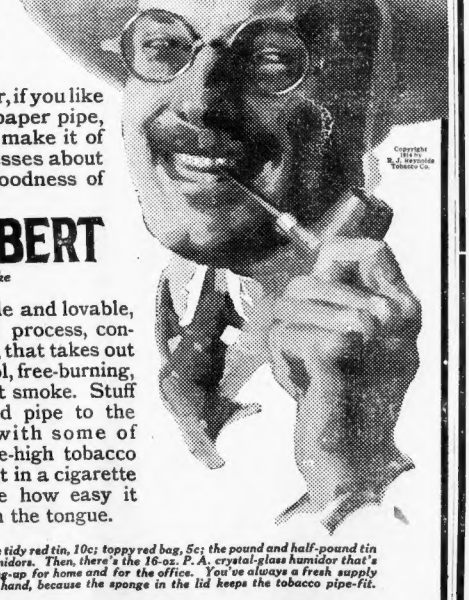
It is the smoke fuel gentle and lovable, made so by a patented process, controlled exclusively by us, that takes out the bite and leaves a cool, free-burning, fragrant smoke. Stuff your old pipe to the brow with some of this ace-high tobacco or roll it in a cigarette and see how easy it feels on the tongue.



The tidy red tin, 10c; toppy red bag, 5c; the pound and half-pound tin humidors. Then, there's the 16-oz. P. A. crystal-glass humidor that's bang-up for home and for the office. You've always a fresh supply on hand, because the sponge in the lid keeps the tobacco pipe-fit.

LINES TO C. W. MURPHY.

(Being a parody on an ancient song).

Charley, dear, listen here.
I'm afraid to go home in the dark.
Every day I hear people say
There's a funeral in your park.
(AW, finish it yourself).

Reports from the front indicate that Freddie Welsh has intrenched behind the no-decision law.

Eddie Collins is bound to become a White Sox regular. Even at this early stage of the game he is forgetting how to hit.

We have always wondered why so many squirrels search for food in Franklin Park when a ten-minute ride will take them to the nearest baseball yard.

"Brains," says Percy Haughton, "are needed on the football field." But they are needed more among the persons who emit college yells.

Frank Baker is listening to the call of the game, but he will not answer until it sounds like the jingle of coin.

Old Vic Huerta still is a patriot. When he wanted to see his first ball game he went to a Federal park.

Boston College Plays First Game Today

The Boston College baseball team will open its season today at University Heights with the Bates team as its opponents. Bates defeated Harvard yesterday so the Boston College team will have to play some great ball in order to win.

Boston College has one of the best teams that has represented the University for many years and a good record is expected on the diamond this year. The infield is one of the best and some good pitching is expected from Fitzgerald and Halloran. Captain Jim Linehan will play first base. He has been an outfielder for the past two seasons, but has resumed this year the position he played in high school. Joe Dee will catch, "Rob" Manley will play second, Jack Maloney of football fame will be at shortstop, and Mitchell at third. Gildea is sure to be one of the outfielders, and Leo Daly and John Flynn are likely to be the others. Boston College plays Georgetown Thursday.

Back to Webster in Baseball

Harvard to Banish Diamond Slang

"At-a-boy," "workin'-all-a-time" and those other quaint doggerel phrases of baseball doxology which were gray-haired in the service of the diamond when George Ade was in swaddling clothes back in dear old Indiana, are coming within the range of the college baseball reformers.

The "long-ridge" of the diamond is decidedly on the defensive, for its very existence is threatened by the high-brow element at Harvard, Yale and Princeton, the "Big Three" who have formed a college league of their own this Spring.

The reformers, in the interests of harmonious literary vocalization, are seeking to have everything which has to do with the vernacular of the diamond banished during this series and seek to have advocated the adoption of a rule that only the pitcher and catcher of the teams can spout during action.

The reforming element dub such diamond classics as "You're workin' fine, boy," "Get the stuff today, alright, alright," and "We'll git him for yuh," as inane twaddle and senseless, idiotic and absolutely useless "Yaumering," and say that it is a disgrace for any college to have a man playing on its team who uses such language.

John Waterman, Harvard's varsity catcher, last year headed a reform movement at Harvard to make pure English one of the most important essentials of the game, and his back to the "Noah Webster" movement created quite an impression through the country.

Waterman is still deeply interested in the rout of the Josh Billings stuff and strongly favors the reformers and especially their ides of restricting coaching while on the field to the team's battery.

Seek Injunction to Show Fight Pictures

NEW YORK, April 27.—Customs Officer Freed at Newark today denies a petition of L. Lawrence Weber of this city to bring pictures of the Willard-Johnson fight to this country for exhibition.

A mandamus is expected to be sought by counsel representing Weber to compel Freed to fix a duty on the pictures. An injunction will be sought to prevent interference with bringing the pictures into the United States.

Somerville High Plays Melrose Today

Somerville High and Melrose High will clash in a Suburban League game this afternoon at Messenger's Field, Melrose, and a hard contest is expected. Jack Ross and Ballou Phillips will be the battery for Melrose, and Captain Fitzgerald and Ned Keating will work for the Red and Blue. Both of these teams stand a good chance of winning the Suburban League title and today's game means a great deal to either team.

Melvin Sheppard Enters $25,000 Suit

NEW YORK, April 28.—Melvin W. Sheppard, holder of world's amateur running records and representative of United States in several Olympic contests, filed suit for $25,000 damages for injuries sustained by a fall in Madison Square Garden February 10 last, which, he alleges, removed him from the field of athletics.

The defendants are the P. & D. Company, the show corporation, and the New York Athletic Club. To their negligence he ascribes in his complaint the injury which resulted in his alleged disability.

On the night of February 10, the complaint sets forth, Sheppard was competing in a 2-yard race in the garden when he stepped upon a part of the flooring which was "weak, dilapidated, rotten and dangerous," and unable to sustain his weight. It broke and he was thrown, he charges, and sustained various bruises.

RED SOX SEEK REVENGE IN SECOND BATTLE WITH NEW YORK YANKEES TODAY

Curley Tells How He Picked Site for Fight

Famous Promoter's Own Authentic Story Revealing the Workings That Led to Big Struggle.

This is the second of a series of the "Inside Story of the Johnson-Willard Battle for the Heavyweight Title," written by Jack Curley, the man who arranged the championship bout. Today he tells how he started looking for a site to stage the struggle.

By JACK CURLEY.

Who Arranged the Willard-Johnson Match for the Championship of the World.

(Copyright, 1915, by Star Company.)

On my arrival home from London with Johnson's contract it was up to me to find a place to stage the battle.

Several locations were submitted by wire. Profiting by previous experience, I knew how to test each locality, whether or not they meant business. My answer to all of them was: "Wire me $200 expense money and I will come to your city and look the ground over." That wire stopped them all.

I opened negotiations with Australia, South America, Cuba and Mexico. Australia made a flat offer of a $50,000 purse.

With $22,000 guarantees to Johnson, and my backers already several thousand dollars out for expenses, the Australia offer would not have left much of anything for Willard, therefore I reasoned that as a last resort.

I had to keep the wheel moving, and as several of the wires I had previously received came from near the border of Mexico, I decided to investigate them at my own expense.

My first stop off was El Paso, across the border from Juarez. I had previously made a trip to the Laurel (Md.) racetrack in company with Harry Pollock, who introduced me to Mr. James Butler, the owner of the track, and Colonel Matt Winn, the general manager.

These two gentlemen own and control the racetrack at Juarez as well. Their introduction gave me immediate entree into Juarez and El Paso business circles.

I found that General Villa was in power at Juarez, represented by his brother, Hipolito Villa. These gentlemen at once saw the great chance to advertise Juarez and to advertise General Villa's power in Mexico.

They readily and kindly gave their consent to hold the battle there, without the least semblance of any sort of graft or remuneration.

El Paso business men, hotel men and bankers, headed by the Chamber of Commerce, immediately saw where a big crowd would be attracted there, and not only offered all their good offices to further the match, but immediately subscribed a bonus of $5,000 in order to name Juarez for the fight spot.

Curley Draws Line Between Fighting and Boxing.

In continually mentioning the word "fight," for which I have been criticised by many experts as well as many promoters who claim the words "boxing contest" should be used, I differ with them.

The 6-round and 10-round and even the twenty-round limited contest permitted in various parts of this and other countries, are really and truly "boxing contests," but to call a forty-five-round heavyweight affair between Jack Johnson and Jess Willard a "boxing contest" would simply be a travesty on the words "boxing contest" and make the others appear as hiding under an assumed name.

The Willard-Johnson bout was a "fight" and had to be represented as a fight, while the New York and the Wisconsin game and other States which have legalized boxing are really and truly "boxing contests"; and every place where I applied for permission to hold the contest I insisted that I was applying for permission to hold a prize fight and not a boxing contest.

El Paso seemed such a great centre and Juarez such an accessible point that, so far as I was concerned, it was Juarez from the moment that I saw it.

However, I was honor bound to consider Billy Gibson, who wished to go in with me on promotion of the match and hold the fight in Havana.

Gibson assured me that he possessed an exclusive license from the government for such contests in Cuba.

Promoters Agree to Let Willard Gamble.

I met Gibson at the Wallack Hotel in New York on my return from El Paso and opened negotiations.

I explained to him that Johnson was to receive $32,000 (an additional thousand having been added for his transportation money from South America to the bottleground), that my backers had spent $6,000 or $7,000 on my travels in the interest of the match, and that Willard was to get a certain percentage of the net or that we could agree to give him a flat sum of about half what Johnson was to receive.

I made it very plain to Mr. Gibson that it would be better to let Willard gamble on that in case of a small house we would be under no obligations to pay him anything.

Mr. Gibson considered my offer for several days, then came to me and told me that he and his associates would have to give up the idea of mixing in with the Willard-Johnson championship match, for the financial arrangements did not appeal to them.

I immediately announced Juarez as the spot, went there to open offices, and was followed a few days later by Jess Willard, his manager, Tom Jones, and a retinue of trainers.

An ideal spot on the outskirts of El Paso was already prepared for him, and Willard immediately started his campaign of training to prepare for the big fight.

Willard Confident of Victory from Start.

No one unless right on the inside of the affair could ever believe the extreme confidence that Willard possessed right from the start; in fact, we shared our feeling of worry that the only chance we had to lose was for something to happen to prevent Johnson from entering the ring.

No matter what amount of unfriendly criticism was heaped upon the match, no matter what the number of experts agreed upon regarding Willard's chances—or, rather, Willard's lack of chances to be plain, regarding Willard's chances—Willard did not have—Big Jess plugged away gamely to get himself ready.

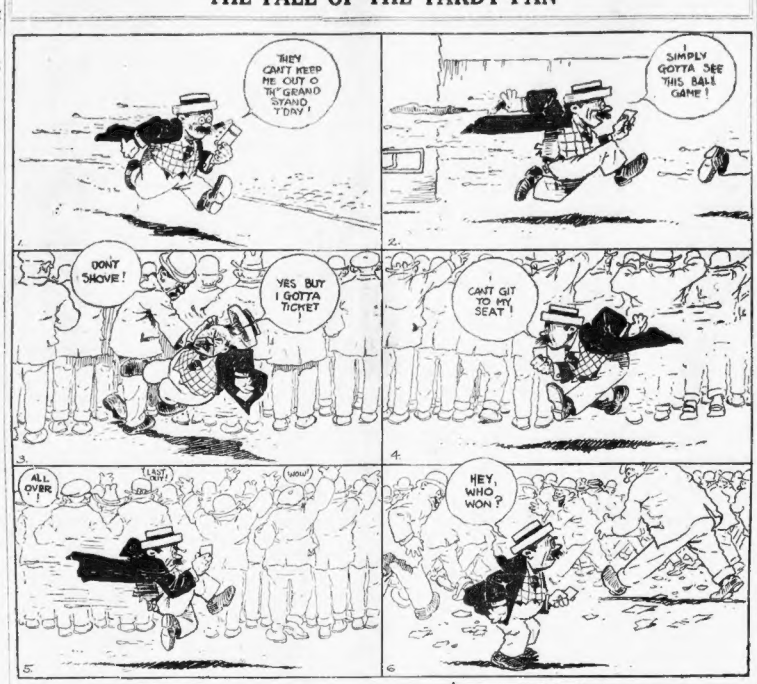
I paid not the slightest attention to these criticisms in my plans to promote the match. During the entire time of promoting the fight, only one thing in connection with it went against the grain.

I was forced to publicly censure William Muldoon, who in my opinion got too personal in his denunciations of the match and Willard's lack of chance—of Willard's lack of chance—which has been disproved by the result.

Mr. Muldoon in my opinion stands away at the head of sportdom, but, like all expert pickers of winners, he falls down occasionally.

(To tomorrow's Boston AMERICAN Mr. Curley will tell of the plans to get Johnson into Juarez. General Carranza held all the seaport towns, and Mr. Curley and his associates had to do a lot of scheming to get Johnson through his lines.)

THE TALE OF THE TARDY FAN



GOLF SEASON ON AT WOLLASTON

The event under the auspices of the Massachusetts Golf Association will be played today when a good field of golfers get away in the Wollaston open amateur golf tournament.

Some of the best local golfers will compete and the result of the play is awaited with no little interest by all golfers.

Francis Quimet, the amateur champion, and Jesse Guilford, the former New Hampshire State champion, are in the entry list.

Wollaston, as well as most of the other courses, needs rain badly, and the condition of the turf is far from being ideal for an open tourney. Today's qualifying round will be at 18 holes and the 16 best gross scorers will continue for the Wollaston cup at scratch. Post entries may be made today but the committee will not accept any that are made after 3 o'clock.

Yale Oarsmen Are Nearly Capsized

NEW HAVEN, April 28.—A sudden squall which kicked up unusually high seas on the harbor imperilled the Yale varsity and sophomore eight-oar crews. Both shells were filled with water, but the oarsmen managed to reach shore safely after thrilling experiences. G. V. Caesar of Tacoma, Wash., who was in a single scull, was pulled aboard the coaching launch.

Morrill Wiggin Is Freshman Captain

Morrill Wiggin, eighteen, of Brookline, has been elected captain of the Harvard freshman crew. He prepared at Noble & Greenough and has been stroking the Harvard first eight during the season. He is 6 ft. 2 in. tall, and weighs 183 pounds. Wiggin was also a member of the Harvard freshman football team, playing at centre.

SHORTSTOP OF THE BRAVES

NEW YORK, April 28.—We gave the Giants another kick in the first game of the series and hope to keep up the good work today. Butch Schmidt's batting was terrible and he helped more than a little in putting the game on ice.

* * *

The last time Perritt faced us was last Fall when he was a member of the St. Louis Cardinals. If I am not mistaken, he won that game, but yesterday, pitching for the Giants, he was the easiest kind of a mark. He was a mighty good pitcher last season but this year has not done so well. However, I expect he will round to before long. There are a number of pitchers in both leagues that are not at their best. When they do there will be a change in the standing of the clubs.

* * *

We have a couple of twirlers—James and Tyler—that ought to be ready right soon, and when they do go to the box, primed for the fray, look out for us. In the meantime, in spite of the absence of Evers and the backwardness of some of our pitchers, we are doing very well.

* * *

Detroit's winning streak begins to remind of that of 1911, when the club went out and licked all the western clubs all over the western territory, piling up an early lead that seemed to end all opposition, but that did not last. This was because the big spring margin was due to the work of a pitching staff which, after a great getaway, blew up. The 1915 Tigers will not win as many of their first twenty-five games as did those of four seasons past, but they threaten to have a comfortable time when they play the clubs of this section.

* * *

It looks better for the Tiger team this year, because it is winning on its batting and base running. All champion Detroit clubs copped that way, none ever having more than one real star pitcher at any one time. The Detroit mound division will never be weaker this year than it is now. It should improve as the season advances.

* * *

The greatest throwing feats in baseball came up for discussion the other day. The question was raised as to the greatest number of assists from the outfield in a single game by an individual. One fan mentioned the record of Patsy Donovan, one-time Red Sox manager, who threw out four runners in a single game. However, this was cast into the discard when a former Philadelphian produced box scores to show that Outfielder Knowdell of Trenton threw out five Philly players on April 12, 1885, a record that has never been equalled.

Four men were thrown out at the plate and Fogarty was nipped trying to stretch a double into a triple. In addition to these assists, Knowdell had eight putouts and an error. On the Trenton team, which at that time was in the Interstate League, was Mike Tiernan, for years a wonderful outfielder with the Giants, and Billy Shettaline, now business manager of the Phillies. Of course, the game referred to was only an exhibition affair, so that Donovan's four assists stand as the major league record.

Manager Oakes of the Pittsburgh Feds boasts of being the first manager in baseball to carry a team on which there are eleven oil magnates. The Pittsburgh Fed team might assume a new name hereafter, and be termed "Oil Operators" or some such like, inasmuch as eleven members of the team are on a fair road to wealth, as the result of an oil strike in the Oklahoma fields.

The glad news arrived the other night in the form of a telegram to Walter Dickson, former Braves pitcher, which informed the eleven players that the oil company in which they carry the controlling stock, had struck a big gusher. Dickson sold stock to the players last Fall and this Spring, but it was not known that the investment was a paying one until the telegram arrived the other night.

The telegram said that oil was struck at a depth of 800 feet and that it threw a stream 100 feet in the air when it broke. Knetzer, Lewis, Bradley, Dickson, Oakes, Allen, Mattis, Hearne, Cammitz, O'Connor and Berger are the men who will hereafter be rated as "oil operators."

PROVIDENCE TEAM OPENS SEASON

PROVIDENCE, R. I., April 28.—Providence Grays and Buffalo will open the International League season here today. Preceding the game there will be a band concert in front of the Crown Hotel.

Wellesley Girls Out to Crew Work

More than 100 girls answered the call for crew candidates at Wellesley College and four of the best boats that ever represented the institution are expected to be developed.

Caroline Blackstone will lead the record holding senior crew. Miss Blackstone is an expert with the oars and is one of the most popular girls in the college. Adelaide Rose, who rowed on the winning crew last Spring, has been chosen captain of the junior crew and Miss Virginia Viall selected to lead the sophomores. The captain of the freshman crew will be appointed later.

The girls row in regular eight-oar shells designed similar to the shells used by the Princeton crews, but made considerably lighter. The course covers more than a quarter-mile stretch on Lake Waban. The competition is not judged entirely on speed as are races between men's college teams. Efficiency and form are both qualities that are required so that while a crew may outspeed another crew it does not always win the competition, for a crew winning the combined points of efficiency and form has the majority.

M'VEY TO MEET SAM LANGFORD

By JACK CONWAY.

Sam McVey, the black Caruso of the ring, is not going to apply for a job with a grand opera company for a couple of weeks more at least. Sam is around town today sporting his classiest amile and telling those who will listen to him that he would be able to knock out Jess Willard inside of ten rounds, and that he believes he would be able to make Sam Langford look like an also ran.

It is pretty well known by this time that Joe Jeanette was scheduled to give McVey's reputation a swift kick at the Atlas A. A. last night. The Hoboken negro tried hard to come through a winner, but after five rounds of hard fighting Referee Phil Powers decided that honors were even. We thought that the Roxbury youth rendered a very good decision. All of which will probably tickle Phil and the rest of the gang who witnessed the little skirmish at the Arena.

PUT UP SLASHING BATTLE.

McVey and Jeanette put up a slashing bout. It was one of the best heavyweight encounters which has been staged in Boston for a long time. There were, of course, a few misguided individuals who were of the opinion that the contest was slow for spots, but they expected too much of the rival glove men.

It was McVey's first tussle in Boston, and he made good with a big bang. He is 5 feet 10½ inches tall and weighs 220 pounds. He is built along the same lines as Sam Langford and has big, powerful shoulders. He is a good boxer, but delights in exchanging blows with an opponent. He does not jab a great deal with his left hand. Instead he hooks it for his opponent's head, and crosses his right hand to the jaw when he has a chance to do so.

McVey's fine showing made a big hit with the powers that be at the Atlas Club and it was announced today that he will battle Sam Langford at the Arena on either May 14 or May 21. Both famous gladiators should put up a merry battle.

But back to the combat at the Arena last night. We gave the honors to McVey in five rounds, to Jeanette in five rounds, while the other two sessions were even. Sam did his best work in the third, fourth, fifth, sixth and eleventh frames, while Jeanette had the best of the going in the first, second, seventh, ninth and twelfth stanzas. The eighth and tenth chapters were a 50-50 proposition.

Jeanette had considerable respect for McVey's left hook. He fought in a crouching position and kept jabbing with his left hand. After he would jab, he would usually fall into a clinch and with quick action in the ring ordered the men to break. Joe was also very nimble on his feet and moved around the ring with great speed.

The Roxbury negro occasionally crossed his right hand to McVey's jaw or under his left eye. In spite of this continuous bombardment was that Sam's left eye was closed tight shut from the fifth round on. It caused him much trouble and handicapped his work during the last few rounds.

Jeanette was not slow in making capital of McVey's misfortune and he kept smashing away at the injured optic with his left glove. He would also rub McVey's face with his boxing gloves in the clinches and Referee Powers said he did not like this treatment if we are to judge from the expression on his rugged face.

There were few slow moments during the entire bout. Referee Powers kept the men fighting at top speed most of the time and there were plenty of clean, hard blows struck before the bell sounded at the end of the final session.

GOOD PRELIMINARY CARD.

The preliminary card was also a high-class affair. Tommy Manion of Charlestown and "Kid" Chakas of Manchester, N. H. fought an eight round draw in the semi-final bout. Chakas weighted 136 pounds while Manion scaled 131 pounds.

Tommy McFarland of the North End won from Bob Smiley of Revere in one of the six-round preliminaries. The other six-round bout, which was between Johnny Murphy of South Boston and Joe Carroll of Lawrence, resulted in a draw.

Newark Wants the A. A. U. Title Games

NEWARK, April 28.—Newark aspires to hold the National A. A. U. senior championships for next year. At a recent meeting a committee of 100 was formed to endeavor to bring the meeting to Newark in conjunction of the celebration of the 250th anniversary of the founding of Newark. President Lill of the A. A. U. and chairman A. G. Spalding of the athletic committee, will probably confer within a short time and let the local committee know just what would be expected in order to hold the championships.

GOV. WALSH WILL OPEN TOURNAMENT

Everything is in readiness for the opening of the Atlantic Coast Bowling Association tournament at Mechanics Building tomorrow night.

The battle will begin at 8.00 p. m. immediately after Governor Walsh steps to the foul line and endeavors to score the first strike, with a specially engraved ball which will be given to him as a souvenir.

Bowlers from far and wide are arriving to witness the first team matches, which consern, for the most part, the local pin smashers. The shining new lanes are near completion, and nearly everything is set to make the tournament a huge success. Indications are that a record crowd will be on hand to witness the competitions.

The teams that will size up the maples for the initial session have been selected by the tournament committee. The complete schedule is being arranged by Roy H. Smith, general manager of the tournament, and will be announced within the next few days.

The following are the teams that will start the pinboys working tomorrow night and keep them hustling on the afternoon and evening of Friday:

$10,000 Job for 'Home Run' Baker

PHILADELPHIA, April 28.—Delaware County legislators at Media, Pa., are authority for the report that J. Franklin Baker, formerly of Trappe, near Norristown, Pa., has been signed by John P. Crozer of Upland at a salary of $10,000 a year to manage Mr. Crozer's stock farm. As a side issue Baker will play third base for the Upland team of the Delaware County League, in which club Mr. Crozer takes a keen interest.

There has been a move to bar Baker from playing with the Upland club and it was reported that the Delaware County League will withdraw from the Interstate if Baker is kept out.

B. C. High in Hard Game with Beverly

A large crowd is expected to attend the baseball game between Boston College High and Beverly High at the South End Grounds this afternoon. These teams are great rivals and the game should be one of the best of the season. Both schools are represented by fast teams and are candidates for the school championship and it is expected will be fought from start to finish. Bobby Gill, one of the best schoolboy pitchers in this section, will pitch for Boston College High.

LOOKING DOWN 6,000 FEET. A WONDER DAY IN ARIZONA.

In next Sunday's American, there will be more photographs of contestants in the American's great race for the twenty-five DE LUXE trips to the California Expositions and the $1,250 in gold.

Meanwhile, don't forget that your Series "B" coupons must be either mailed or delivered to the Contest Department at No. 5 Winthrop square by 5 p. m. Monday, May 3. Any coupons brought after 5 o'clock p. m. on that day or, if sent by mail, bearing a postmark later than 5 o'clock p. m. on that day will not be accepted.

We have tried to make this clear and have repeated it so that there can be no excuse for not getting the coupons in on time.

Today marks the end of one-third of this splendid competition. Thirty-three days have elapsed since the publication of the first coupon and when only twice this number of days have come and gone, twenty-five fortunate New Englanders will be the envied of all their friends and acquaintances.

Several candidates have written, asking what the winners will do during the day they will spend at the Grand Canyon of Colorado. By the way, while this wonderful Canyon is commonly known as the Canyon of Colorado, it is really in Arizona, and gets its name from the Colorado river.

Probably the tourists will reach the Canyon about 7 o'clock in the morning; if they do, they will have breakfast and luncheon and dinner at the famous El Tovar Hotel. Then they will be free to walk along the rim of the Canyon and look into an abyss where the rushing river looks like a mere thread.

As the depth of this cut, made by upheavals of nature and the erosion of the sweeping Colorado, is more than a mile, it is regarded as a hazardous journey to attempt the descent. It can be done, but it requires a whole day of strenuous effort, and is not without some danger. For this reason the American's guests will be more satisfied to view it from the edge.

This canyon is five or six miles wide at the top and falls in several steppes to a depth of about 3,000 feet; then it takes a sheer drop, and at the bottom the swift river dashes through in the midst of gloom. As the canyon is 200 miles long, the tourists can walk along it as far as they like.

The El Tovar Hotel occupies a picturesque site on the very brim of the canyon and the twenty-five winners of the American's tours will find a great delight in viewing the scenery from its capacious verandas.

We shall mention, from day to day, the various points of interest along the route of travel from Boston to San Francisco and in sunny California, Arizona and the other States through which the American's guests will pass on their more than three weeks' journey.

In this way, everyone will get an adequate idea of the real value of the tour, not only from a picturesque but from an educational standpoint.

CANDIDATES! CAUTION! Do It NOW, Mr. Curley

Why WAIT Until the NEXT Time to Tell the District Attorney Who It Is That Tried to Bribe You?

Mayor Curley says that a representative of one of the great corporations of the country made to him a corrupt offer of $5,000 on the classical "fifty-fifty" basis.

Mr. Curley announces, very formally, that the NEXT time any such proposition is made to him he will take the matter to the District Attorney. But why does the Mayor not take THIS matter to the DISTRICT ATTORNEY NOW? This attempt which he reveals is a crime, and to conceal it is morally, if not in contemplation of the law, making one's self responsible for it after the fact.

But if Mayor Curley will not tell who made this corrupt proposal to him then the District Attorney ought to compel him to reveal it. The District Attorney has now a public notice of the fact that a crime was committed, and it is his high duty to investigate the facts and to summon Mr. Curley before the Grand Jury and there oblige him to tell what he knows.

This plan of chasing thieves with a blare of trumpets never catches them. ONE CONVICTION, especially of a representative of big interests, is worth a thousand threats of exposure. Therefore, in the public interest, let Mr. Curley voluntarily tell what he knows about this whole business; and, if he still refuses, let the District Attorney compel him to speak.

If You Have Consumption, CURE IT—Don't Be Afraid of It

Typhoid Is Cured Nearly Always, and Consumption Can Be Cured Far More Easily Than Typhoid. Indifference and Ignorance Are the Main Obstacles

Copyright, 1915, by the Star Company.

Chicago recently announced, with legitimate pride, "the dedication of the first municipal tuberculosis sanitarium of its kind in the world."

Chicago now has 1,843 beds for consumptives, and the number this year will be increased 2,357.

The right spirit is shown in the building of that municipal home for the fighting of a terrible disease.

Dr. Young, the Commissioner of Health, representing Mayor Harrison, said:

"This enterprise is unique in Chicago, for it is the first complete institution of any size for the care of the sick possessed by the city as such. This is not a charitable institution. If you come here you are taking care of yourself. Your taxes pay the bill. Under these conditions we propose that this place shall be good enough for anybody and free to everybody."

It would be well for the country if more public officials in and outside of Chicago understood that institutions paid for by the people are not charitable. For the people who go to them PAY FOR THEM AND PAY THE SALARIES OF THE OFFICIALS, THE DOCTORS AND THE NURSES, AND ALL OTHERS.

One trouble with this country is that officials elected by the people and paid by the people have the impression that the people are their servants, whereas the reverse is the case.

Dr. Young of Chicago sets a very good example when he reminds those who come to the public hospital that they are coming to that which they OWN AND PAY FOR.

In connection with this opening of a splendid institution in Chicago, a place where the white plague is fought in comfortable cottages, in cheerful surroundings, it is appropriate to publish some good news for consumptives.

The greatest surgeon lives in Chicago. His work is useful to doctors and to the sick all over the world. He was discussing with the editor of this newspaper the importance of making medical knowledge public and simple.

He said in substance—we do not pretend to quote him exactly:

"It would be an excellent thing if the public knew and if the newspapers would emphasize the fact that consumption in its preliminary stage can be cured, and it can be cured much more easily, for example, than typhoid.

"Much good has been done by newspapers spreading information concerning medical treatment, even though occasionally misinformation be mixed with the information.

"Newspapers discussing surgical treatment, taking it for granted, as in the case of the operation for appendicitis, have rendered a public service.

"Public service could be rendered if the newspapers day in and day out would emphasize simple, important medical truths."

Unquestionably the trouble with the public is indifference to facts.

When an individual is told that he has typhoid fever, or that some member of his family has typhoid fever, he at once does WHATEVER IS NECESSARY.

The patient is put to bed, taken care of. Diet is regulated, there is no question of indifference or of leaving things to take their own course.

Rules are carried out strictly, proper nursing is seen to, and the patient usually recovers.

Consumption is neglected because it is long and tiresome. Death is at the end of it just as surely as in typhoid or in more rapid diseases.

But the public has become accustomed and rather callous to consumption.

The patient knows that there are hundreds of thousands of other consumptives, and he goes along indifferently as the leper used to do in the olden days, or as the sufferers from sleeping sickness do in Africa.

One will say, "I am poor and cannot send my child away to a

The World of Business

By ELBERT HUBBARD

A MAN whose knowledge of business is academic can never have a due understanding and appreciation of the struggle to keep a business going. The butter a business is managed the more self-lubricating it seems to the outsider.

No engine, no matter how beautifully made, will run without a constant supply of power.

Just so is it necessary, always and forever, to pump new steam into a business.

A business that is not charged with the live current of personality will soon be moving on momentum—and then it stops.

* * *

No two industries are exactly the same. Also, there is no business that is exactly the same one year after another. Conditions change. New modes, fashions, customs come in. To take care of the overhead, meet obligations, face the payroll, and keep employes sweet and good-natured, is the task of the business man.

And then, to do all this with a minimum of exhaust, keeping everything perfectly lubricated so that the outsider sees only harmony and perfect adjustment—this is generalship.

In many a big business establishment somebody is sweating blood to hold the helpers to their tasks, to shut off the "indoor sports," to satisfy customers and the public at large and keep the whole thing on a safe basis.

Nights, days, Sundays, always and forever, anxiety is gnawing at the heart of this business man. He has to be eternally on the bridge, holding her prow 'gainst "The Lisard Light, three thousand miles away."

* * *

The men in charge of our governmental affairs should be man big enough to sympathize with the struggle that industrial leaders have to make in order to keep a concern expanding, growing, evolving. For to stand still is to retreat.

The meddlesome, harassing, critical, calumniating attitude toward men who maintain payrolls injures alike every wage-earner, every retail merchant, every manufacturer, every railroadman, every banker.

To fill the air with suspicion and doubt when good nature and co-operation should prevail is a great hardship on the human race.

Progress is beautiful and right. Eternal discontent must always prevail; but we must also remember Aristotle's "Law of Diminishing Returns."

Let us keep to the broad highway and travel on, but as we travel it is not for us to exceed the speed limit nor indulge in political experiments; and, above all things, we must preserve and conserve America's greatest asset, which is the animation, ambition and initiative of our inventors, originators and industrial leaders.

No army can hope to succeed when it begins to revile, ridicule, accuse and malign its officers.

Business is a matter of human service.

Business men today succeed only as they benefit both patrons and employes.

We make our money out of our friends.

The loom upon which the fabric of business is woven is friendship, and all wise business men know it.

This way lies success.

He who would oppress the consumer is inviting a competition that will wipe him off the cosmic slate.

* * *

And another thing, we must realize that in all human efforts there is a degree of waste. A little play of the wheel on the axle is not only desirable but necessary.

A concrete roadbed for a railroad would never do. There must be a little spring of the ties. In human affairs do not imagine that things will be found ninety-nine per cent. pure. Motives are mixed, and occasionally the human machine will break down.

Business men today know that truth is an asset and a lie a liability, that honesty pays; that sanitation, sanity, health, good cheer and absolute frankness in all transactions are necessary to success in business.

Sophistry, prevarication, hypocrisy, all lead to Limbus. Success is based on confidence. Credit is based on character, and character is the sum total of what a man is.

Character means clear eyes, good teeth, an even pulse, equanimity, and a perfect willingness to cooperate and reciprocate in every reasonable way.

Character demands that we eliminate jealousy, hate, doubt, and realize that at the last humanity is one. To injure another is to injure ourselves. We benefit ourselves only as we benefit humanity.

This is the philosophy of the modern American business man.

More Truth Than Poetry

The Perils of the Past

FIFTY kinds of streptococci crawled about the oaken seats,
There were ninety million microbes in the air;
And bacilli roamed the blackboards in great devastating fleets,
Yet we never even dreamed that they were there.
It was most unsanitary and, in such an age as this,
To attempt to brave such perils would be vain;
Yet somehow we all survived it, and our ignorance was bliss—

Mysteries of the Heavens Explained

Garrett P. Serviss Says: "Two Vast Streams of Stars Flowing in Opposite Directions Indicate That the Universe May Have Been Formed by the Meeting of Two Great Primordial Clouds"

By GARRETT P. SERVISS

IF two smokers sitting in opposite chairs blow each a cloud of tobacco smoke toward the other, the clouds will meet and mingle, forming a little model of the starry universe, as it is represented by some of the latest investigations of astronomers.

The particles constituting each of the clouds have a common movement in the direction in which they were blown, so that when the clouds are combined two opposite motions appear, one set of particles travelling one way and another set just the contrary way.

In addition to this the particles have individual motions inside each cloud, so that, as the clouds penetrate one another, going in opposite directions, their respective particles do not all travel in perfectly parallel lines, or with equal velocity. There are stragglers among them, and some whirl around in eddies. But, as a whole, each of the original clouds retains its general direction of movement. No account is taken of the resistance of the air.

Now, to make this cloud of smoke with its oppositely moving particles present a striking image of the universe, as astronomers are beginning to see it, it is only necessary, in imagination, to scatter its particles, more widely and to make every one of them shine like a miniature star.

Two Great Streams of Stars Pass Through the Sky

For the latest studies of stellar motions show that there are in the heavens two vast star streams, moving in nearly opposite directions and apparently including, in one or the other of their almost innumerable hosts, all the shining orbs, great or small, that the eye or the telescope beholds in the immensity of space around us.

Our own sun is one of these flying particles, belonging to one of the two great intermingling stellar currents of which the visible universe consists. The fact that we ourselves are in swift motion along with our sun is one of the chief reasons why the double set of star currents was not discovered long ago.

We will not stop to inquire what could have been the reason for the meeting of two clouds of stars or what was the condition of those clouds before their encounter, for there are other strange facts to be considered.

To understand these we must recall that astronomers have been able to tell the relative ages of the stars by analyzing their light. Such analysis shows what substances they are composed of and in what state those substances exist in the different stars.

It is generally considered that stars containing helium are the younger or the most recently formed. As more and more of the chemical elements appear in a star its age increases. In human life we have infancy, youth, young manhood, full manhood and old age; so in the stars there are four or five distinguishable ages, the first of which, stellar infancy, is represented by the condition of the helium stars.

Now (and this seems very strange) it has been found that the velocity of the individual stars moving in the two great streams or currents varies with the age of those individuals.

The Older the Star Is the Swifter It Moves

The older the star the swifter its motion. Here is a decided departure from the human similitude that we have used for illustration, since among us agility decreases instead of increases with age!

The helium stars move very slowly; those of the next older class more swiftly, and so on. And then the mystery deepens, for the helium stars, and their younger brethren, show a decided preference for one of the two great star streams, and the older stars exhibit an equally strong tendency to confine themselves to just the opposite stream!

So the two mysterious currents consist, broadly speaking, the one of young, slow stars, and the other of old, swift stars. Why do they keep apart? And why, among the stars, is youth dashed with gravity and age inspired with nimbleness?

Primordial Matter Is Subject to No Motion

Although it would seem futile to try to answer such questions even if put in a scientific form, yet Professor J. C. Kapteyn, one of the original discoverers of the streaming of the stars, has pointed out facts which may eventually clear up these mysteries. He shows that the sluggishness of the helium stars is an indication that they have been formed directly out of something which he calls "primordial matter" and which is probably identical with the substance of the huge nebulous cloud in the constellation Orion.

This primordial matter seems to be subject to almost no motion except that of the great current in which it lies. As it condenses into stars, gravitation begins to act more and more strongly upon it, and thus the stars, as they grow older and denser, acquire an increasing motion independent of the general movement.

In confirmation of this, the fact is pointed out that the Orion Nebula possesses precisely the movement characteristic of the helium stars, and so may be regarded as a birthplace of such stars.

Thanks from the Suffragists

Mr. William Randolph Hearst,
Boston AMERICAN, Boston, Mass.
My dear Mr. Hearst:

The Massachusetts Woman Suffrage Association desires to gratefully acknowledge your assistance to the suffrage cause by the publication of the suffrage campaign issue of the Boston AMERICAN.

A great "Votes for Women" campaign is on in Massachusetts. The men voters hold the power to grant to Bay State women the ballot on November 2 next. Those voters must be convinced that they should mark "Yes" for the suffrage amendment on election day, and there could have been no better opportunity to present our arguments to the men of Massachusetts than that given us by the campaign number of the Boston AMERICAN.

We are extremely grateful for the spirit of co-operation shown us by the members of the AMERICAN staff, with whom we came for a while into daily contact.

When the votes are counted on November 2 and women are declared eligible to the ballot, the Massachusetts Woman Suffrage Association will feel that no small share of gratitude for the result is due to the always consistent support of woman's cause by the Boston AMERICAN.

Very sincerely,
GERTRUDE HALLADAY LEONARD,
Chairman Executive Board.

great distance." Another will say, "I cannot leave my business and go away to take care of myself."

It isn't necessary to send your child away, it isn't necessary to leave your business.

To cure consumption you need:

Common sense and willingness to listen to those who know.

Good food and plenty of it. (Poverty is the mother of consumption.)

Fresh air, above all, night and day.

If you are working where there is no fresh air, complain to the Health Department, and things will change.

If you keep your windows closed at night, don't blame the tubercular bacillus; blame yourself for your illness.

Fresh air, sunlight, long sleep at night, good food, will cure consumption in all but the last stages.
